21-Day Grace Is Assured Men Eligible For Induction

'Screening' Exams Abolished; All Post-Acceptance Furloughs Stopped

By Walter Wood

National Selective Service headquarters in a sweeping revision of its system of physical examinations for selectees moved yesterday to eliminate uncertainties among draft-eligible men as to "if and when" they will be drafted.

New regulations, effective February 1, provide at least three weeks notice of induction to men physically acceptable for service. This will be accomplished by:

1. Abolishing the present system of "screening" examinations by local boards.
2. Giving preinduction (final) examinations by Army and Navy doctors a minimum of 21 days before induction date, thus giving draftees a more uniform period of time before reporting to either of the armed forces.
3. Eliminating all postinduction furloughs, now three weeks in the Army and one week in the Navy.

Local Boards Notified

To assure an effective start of the new set-up next month, Selective Service ordered local boards to begin at once to order a "substantial number" of 1-A men to report for the new preinduction physicals at Army induction stations. The boards, in the meantime, will have to meet normal January calls.

In adopting the new rules, Selective Service is carrying out the order from Congress for the preinduction exams and for eliminating doubt among draft eligibles about their physical condition and whether they will meet service standards.

How System Works

The new system will work like this:

Men classified 1-A will be sent directly to Army induction stations for examination by Army and Navy doctors. All will return home as civilians and those accepted for service will not be ordered to report for actual induction for 21 days.

After a sufficiently large pool of physically fit men is built up, the period between examination and induction may be even greater, it was reported.

A man who passes exams at the induction station will be placed in one of three groups: "Army general-service" "Army limited-service" or "Navy," according to physical condition.

Those rejected for all types of

Gun-Driven Taxi Tour

Two Armed Ex-Convicts Sought In Kidnaping of Man, Woman

The FBI, Navy Intelligence and New York and Washington police combined last night to work on the mystery of the kidnaping of a pretty employe of the American Embassy in Havana and a taxi driver when the two arrived back in Washington after being shanghaied to New York by two armed former convicts.

The kidnaping took place Thursday night. The couple arrived back in Washington last night by an Eastern Airlines plane.

They were Miss Mercedes Platt, about 25, employe of the American Embassy in Cuba, and Herman Corman, 22, of 745 Newton pl. nw., driver of the Washington Airport limousine which the bandits also took.

The pair was forced to travel to New York with the bandits, and forced to leave the airport car in Brooklyn at an early hour yesterday.

In New York, Miss Platt told police she had arrived in Washington by plane from Buffalo, N. Y. She got into the car operated by Corman at the entrance to the airport and asked him to take her to the Ebbit Hotel. Afterwards he picked up two other passengers, both clad in riding togs.

It was the latter two men who are accused of having effected the kidnaping.

Miss Platt, upon her arrival here last night, was given an escort by naval and FBI officers and taken from the airport without talking to reporters. However, Corman, still in his uniform of airport driver, did give this description of their adventure:

MERCEDES PLATT

"Miss Platt got into the car and then the two men came over afterwards and also said they wished to be taken to Washington.

"When we got to Roaches Run, a creek between the airport and Highway Bridge, one of them thrust a gun into either my back or my ribs—I do not remember which—and told me to drive to Baltimore. I also was told to drive carefully,

New Baruch Report Plans Reconversion

Termination Clause Reported Drafted For Insertion in All War Contracts

By Ben W. Gilbert

A recommendation that reconversion plans be built into this Nation's war production plans without delay has been included in a draft of the "third Baruch report," it was learned yesterday.

The report, which is being completed by Bernard M. Baruch, 73-year-old financier, and John Hancock of the New York financial house of Lehman Brothers, was started at the request of War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes and President Roosevelt.

Sources familiar with the work of Baruch and Hancock state that they have already completed the drafting of a proposed uniform contract termination clause for insertion in all war contracts.

Clause Prepared

A War Mobilization official stated that the text of the proposed contract termination clause would be announced shortly to enable the procurement services to begin inserting it in all contracts, but that release of the rest of the report might be delayed.

The first Baruch report dealt with the rubber problem and resulted in the establishment of the Office of Rubber Director. The so-called "labor budget" plan for controlling manpower which was adopted for the West Coast was the subject of the second Baruch report.

Early drafts of the proposed "third" report indicate that the following points will be made:

1. The contract termination board composed of representatives of the procurement services which was set up to assist in the drafting of the proposed contract termination clause should be made a permanent agency.

Civilian Goods Production

2. Production of civilian goods should be reinstituted as soon as materials are released.

3. Closer cooperation between the procurement services and the War Production Board with respect to the scheduling of production cutbacks is required. Up to now, the process of cutting back unneeded war production has not been orderly.

4. Plans should be drawn so that decisions on who is to do what about resumed civilian production can be made as soon as possible.

5. An intensive effort should be made to simplify the present war contract structure.

6. The letting of subcontracts should be planned better so that small manufacturers capable of producing civilian goods are not tied up unnecessarily.

7. Procedures should be set up to provide for prompt negotiation of cash settlements in connection with contract termination, wherever possible.

Release of the report is expected to be an official go-ahead signal to the Government to begin postwar

Americans Capture San Vittore

Fierce 3-Day Battle Ends in Victory; Doughboys Increase Threat to Cassino

By Wes Gallagher

Algiers, Jan. 7 (AP).—The fortress village of San Vittore, just six miles from Cassino and the flat plains leading toward Rome, fell to Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army at 3:37 p. m. yesterday after three days of desperate, no-quarter street fighting with a German garrison.

More than 100 prisoners were taken and at least that many were slain as the strong point in the German's winter line was overwhelmed, Don Whitehead, Associated Press war correspondent reported from the wrecked town. Many Germans slipped through the American cordon to a hill beyond where they were immediately attacked.

San Vittore was captured after British and American troops had threatened to outflank it entirely in their march toward the Italian capital.

American forces to the east of Cassino hacked their way forward 4 miles to storm 3500-foot Mount Maio, cutting the German supply road from Cervaro to San Vittore. Meanwhile, British troops pressing up the Garigliano River from the south reached the edge of the Cassino plain, where their tanks might go into action for the first time.

Germans defending the crumbled remains of San Vittore were in imminent danger of being trapped and cut off by these con-

Recognition Refusal Seen

'Outside' Forces Aided Revolt In Bolivia, Hull Indicates

Indicating that the United States will refuse recognition of Bolivia's new regime, Secretary of State Hull announced last night that information available here "increasingly strengthens the belief that forces outside of Bolivia and unfriendly to the defense of the American republics inspired and aided the Bolivian revolution."

While Hull did not elaborate on the "forces," it was noted that there have been widespread reports Argentines may have played roles in the overthrow.

Argentina, which is the only American nation maintaining ties with Axis nations and the only American country to recognize the new government of Bolivia, was excluded in the recent announcement revealing that the United States would exchange information with other American republics about the revolution that placed in the presidency Maj. Gualberto Villarroel. He gained power in a six-hour revolt last month.

The text of Hull's statement:

"It is my information that by the consultation now in progress there is already taking place considerable exchange of information regarding the origin of the revolution in Bolivia. This assembling of facts should soon permit each government to reach its own conclusions. The information now available here increasingly strengthens the belief that forces outside of Bolivia and unfriendly to the defense of the American republics inspired and aided the Bolivian revolution."

The State Department has conferred with British Ambassador Lord Halifax, it was learned, and it is believed that Britain will follow the United States' lead in this Government's position toward Bolivia and Argentina. Economic sanctions might be imposed.

Tamayo to Demand Proof

La Paz, Bolivia, Jan. 7 (AP).—Minister of Foreign Affairs Jose Tamayo declared tonight that if information which United States Secretary of State Hull said "increasingly strengthens" the belief that foreign forces aided the recent Bolivian revolution is made public, the Bolivian government "will demand concrete and precise proof."

75,000 Nazis Are Routed In Big, New Soviet Drive

Russians Encircle Kirovgrad; Other Forces 22 Miles Inside Old Poland

London (Saturday), Jan. 8 (AP).—A new Russian offensive in the central Ukraine has broken through five German divisions on a 62-mile front, has surrounded the Dnieper bend stronghold of Kirovograd and today was nearing a link with the unchecked northern Ukrainian drive, part of which was now 22 miles inside the old Polish border.

The new offensive by Gen. Ivan S. Konev's Second Ukrainian army began January 5 and sent perhaps 75,000 Germans retreating in disorder, abandoning their military equipment and supplies, said the Moscow midnight communique.

More than 120 towns and hamlets were captured in this breakthrough that advanced 25 miles in the first three days and netted large numbers of prisoners from the routed Nazi divisions.

Armies 56 Miles Apart

This new drive was less than 56 miles from the southernmost portion of the great offensive arc of the First Ukranian army under Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin. The top of this arc, stretching more than 300 miles from northwest to southeast, reached Klesow in a 12-mile advance inside old Poland. Red army units on the lower rim curled eastward to capture Rzhishchev on the middle Dnieper below Kiev, linking with a long-established Russian bridgehead south of Pereyaslav.

Berlin wept even further than Moscow and in a broadcast by Capt. Ludwig Sertorious said "it now appears as if Vatutin's left wing has contacted units of General Konev's army eastward and southward of Belaya Tserkov."

If the two armies had not already joined hands it appeared they would do so shortly for the Germans seemed unable to stand against the might of the two rampant armies.

5000 Germans Slain

Vatutin's forces alone reported 5000 Germans killed in the last 24 hours, and in the last five days official Soviet count has placed German dead at 20,000 along the entire Russian front.

Once joined, the two armies would not only seek to clear the rich Dnieper bend—the Germans' easternmost salient in Russia—of perhaps 500,000 to 750,000 men but batter the Nazis out of all southern Russia into Poland and Rumania.

Troops Eager To Vote, Army Paper Says

Majority Opposed To States' Control, Stars, Stripes Avers

Algiers, Jan. 7 (AP).—The Stars and Stripes, published for troops in this theater, declares in tomorrow's issue that soldiers it has polled are overwhelmingly in favor of participating in U. S. elections this year, and calls upon Congress to enact a uniform balloting law.

The editorial expresses disappointment in a Senate-approved measure which leaves soldier-balloting up to the States.

Soldiers believe, it says, that "they would be unable to make proper use of the franchise unless Congressmen passed some kind of uniform law making it simple for citizen soldiers to vote.

"They asked the question, 'Can you imagine what percentage will actually vote if each has to proceed through various State methods, most of them not even knowing the requirements of their respective States; the process takes months, and we have little time to spare.'"

The editorial quotes the majority of soldiers as feeling that a Congressman's remark that they were more concerned with the fate of the Varga girl than with voting was "in bad taste" and that the vote issue was "too fundamental to be made the subject of a wisecrack."

It adds that the nearer the soldiers have been to the fighting the more strongly they feel on the subject, as the Naples edition has received more mail about it than the African editions.

States Queried on Vote

The Senate Privilcges and Elections Committee is canvassing all Governors on what State action they have taken to speed servicemen's voting legislation preliminary to a second Senate effort to pass a Federal war ballot bill.

Amity Move

Two powerful labor unions—the AFL International Association of Machinists, and the CIO United Automobile Workers of Amrica—yesterday entered into a sweeping "no raiding" pact and expressed the hope "that this policy will result in a better understanding between them and will eventually lead to a united labor movement and make possible the further expansion of the trade union movemen among the unorganized workers."

The pact, which to last for the war's duration, was formally approved yesterday by the UAW executive board meeting in Chicago, and was subsequently announced by the two unions. The language was worked out recently at a joint conference of union officials in Cleveland.

Th UAW, which dominates the old automobile manufacturing field and has a substantial number of aircraft contracts, claims to represent 1,200,000 workers. The machinists with workers in aircraft, shipbuilding, railroads and munitions claim to represent 660,000 workers.

The text of the agreement follows:

"In the interest of the national war program and as an aid to uninterrupted production in vital war industries, the UAW-CIO and the IAM-AFL hereby agree that for the war's duration the following policy and understanding shall prevail:

U. S. Factories Built 85,946 Planes in 1943

Deliver 8802 Aircraft In December to Top 1942 Total by 80%

American aircraft plants delivered a total of 8802 planes in December for a 1943 total of 85,946, War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson announced yesterday.

Production was 95 per cent of schedule, Nelson said, and officials explained the small lag as due to a combination of the Christmas holiday, the influenza epidemic, and the fact that several hundred planes were manufactured which were not accepted officially until January.

The new figure brought the total produced since July, 1940 when the defense program officially began to 137,000. A total of 47,873 were produced in 1942.

Officials stated that a very satisfactory increase in the total weight produced had been secured over November, with production of four-engine bombers which have been turned out at a rate in excess of 1000 a month at a record level, and in excess of schedule.

Nelson made the announcement after receiving an official report from the Aircraft Production Board which is headed by WPB Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson.

The report said that an average of 339 airplanes were produced for each December working day.

"The trend of aircraft production during 1944," it was reported, "will be toward a reduction of trainer and certain other types, and an increase in the urgently needed combat types. Thus, with the increased production of the heavier bombers of the B-29 type (the superbomber), and the introduction of other new and high performance types, there will be a general leveling off of production in numbers, but the production of aircraft by weight will continue on the uptrend."

Aircraft industry sources now expect that a peak production rate of about 10,000 planes a month will be reached before the middle of the year. More than 100,000 planes are scheduled for 1944.

The kind of job that was done in 1943 is illustrated by the fact that actual numbers rose 80 per cent during the year, but the proportion of heavy combat types increased to such an extent that aircraft production by weight showed a 127 per cent gain over the period, from 37 million pounds monthly at the start of 1943 to 84 million pounds in December.

Yanks Batter Germany, Bag 42 Fighters

750 Other Allied Craft Hit Invasion Route in France

London (Saturday), Jan. 8 (AP).—Forty-two German fighters were destroyed yesterday by hundreds of U. S. Flying Fortresses, Liberators, and long-range fighters which smashed deep into southwest Germany as more than 750 Allied medium bombers and fighters delivered day-long series of blows at the northern France invasion route.

Shortly after the American bombers returned, RAF night bombers roared across the Channel in the dark headed for the Continent in a continuation of the Allied assaults.

(A Stockholm report identified the target of the raiders as the I. G. Farben chemical works at Ludwigshafen and Mannheim.

(Another Stockholm report said Mediterranean-based American planes bombed Wiener Neustadt near Vienna, site of an airplane parts plant.)

The cost of the heavy raid into Germany, which was conducted against generally weak Nazi fighter opposition, was 12 bombers and 7 fighter planes, with the pilot of one fighter reported safe by the joint U. S. Air Force and Air Ministry communique. Swiss dispatches said one American bomber landed safely in Switzerland.

Attack Through Clouds

With the aid of a secret navigational device, the heavy bombers pressed home their attack through heavy clouds in the region where the record 1500-plane American fleet struck December 30 and which neutral dispatches then identified as the great chemical and poison gas center, Ludwigshafen.

With yesterday's bag the total number of German fighters knocked down so far this month in three major American raids stands at 149.

Of the seven fighters lost six were U. S. long-range escort ships which covered the attack the entire distance of some 800 miles roundtrip while the other was from RAF, Canadian and Allied supporting formations which covered the withdrawal. Three fighter-bombers were missing from the coastal sweeps.

The Swiss radio reported Allied planes were over Hungary during the day but their point of origin and objective were not known.

The medium bombers, plus many squadrons of fighters, attacked un-

Allied Fliers Sink Or Damage 30 Jap Troop, Cargo Craft

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Saturday), Jan. 8 (AP).—Allied airmen hunting down Japanese troop and supply barges have sunk or damaged 30 of the vessels, killing or wounding 100 of the enemy.

The enemy depends almost exclusively on this traffic for reinforcing and supplying his defense areas.

A communique today said the attacks were made near Sio and Sarang Harbor on the north coast of New Guinea, at Rein Bay and Rabaul, New Britain. It was at Rabaul that the enemy suffered the 100 casualties.

Fighting in the Borgen Bay sector of the Cape Gloucester, New Britain, invasion area fell into a lull.

At Kavieng, on New Ireland, Royal Australian Air Force Catalinas and planes from the South Pacific command bombed an enemy cargo ship and a destroyer. Two Japanese cruisers and three destroyers have been heavily damaged and probably sunk there so far this month.

Australians advancing up the Huon Peninsula coast toward the Americans at Saidor have occupied Kelanoa village and have closed the gap to 65 miles.

President Talks With Smith On 1945 Budget

President Roosevelt, still confined to his quarters after an attack of grip, worked yesterday on his budget recommendations for the fiscal year beginning July 1. He continued work, too, on his annual message to Congress.

His only appointment was with Budget Director Harold Smith.

Not until he consults with congressional leaders will the President fix the date for presenting the annual message, in person if he feels like it. Secretary Stephen Early said the message would not go to Congress on Monday, the day it reconvenes.

Early said Mr. Roosevelt was pretty well over the grip but that his physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, still was taking no chance because he did not want a "flareback."

Publisher Jailed for Refusing Answers in Sedition Probe

By Joseph Paull

Douglas M. Stewart, copublisher of the defunct Scribner's Commentator, was sentenced yesterday to 90 days in jail for placing himself in contempt of court by refusing to give true answers to the special District grand jury investigating sedition.

Simultaneously Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher took steps to bring the case to early trial against 30 persons accused of conspiring to undermine the morale and loyalty of the armed forces and to set up a Nazi regime in this country.

Late in the day, E. J. Parker Sage appeared in District Court to become the first person under the new indictment to be arraigned here. Sage, who comes from Detroit and was publisher of the vitriolic Nationalistic News Letter pleaded innocent to the indictment. He was released under $2500 bond after agreeing to sign a statement that he was a pauper in order to have counsel appointed by the court.

Stewart was shaky as he sat before the justice to hear the proceedings against him. On two other occasions, it was related by O. John Rogge, special assistant to the Attorney General, Stewart had appeared before the grand jury to deny he knew the source of three bundles containing $36,000 in $20 bills he said were found in his home and office at Lake Geneva, Wis., in the summer of 1940.

Stewart was ordered on Thursday to give "forthright and true"

Treasury Tightens Rules

Liquor Investigation Made Virtually Industry-Wide

Virtually the entire liquor manufacturing industry of the United States was brought into a Justice Department probe yesterday when subpenas were issued in District Court requiring 85 distillers, vintners, processors and major wholesalers to submit their records to a District grand jury by January 31.

Similar subpenas were issued December 15 against the "big four" of the liquor industry—Schenley Distillers, Hiram Walker & Sons, National Distillers and Joseph E. Seagram & Sons.

Simultaneously, the Treasury Department aimed a new blow at the whisky black market. It announced wholesalers must now present daily instead of monthly reports on liquor consignments. In this way, the agency can trace any consignment where there are suspicious circumstances.

"This should contribute substantially to drying up sources of tax-paid spirits now entering the black market," said Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury.

Restrictions on labeling of poorer grade whisky were tightened. Internal Revenue Commissioner Robert E. Hannegan said "some of this whisky is too bad to be given even the designation of imitation whisky."

The grand jury probe is to determine the extent of the introduction of new brand names to sell diluted whisky, hoarding of stocks to force up prices, damming of distribution outlets and reasons for the use of smaller-sized bottles instead of the customary pint and quart sizes.

Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge said, "the ramifications of the industry are so complex that it is impossible to get an accurate picture of the interlocking ownerships and interests by studying only a few of the leading companies. There is a substantial public interest involved in the operations of this industry, and we have decided to make our investigation as complete and as detailed as possible.

"At the same time, it should be borne in mind that the issuance of these subpenas does not necessarily imply that any of the firms are guilty of any violation. This is the usual legal process followed in such investigations and carries no implication of wrong-doing."

No local firms were listed among the subpenas.

The Justice Department began its probe after executive conferences with the Senate Liquor Investigating Subcommittee. Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana said the probe was a poised blow "at monopolies and black markets."

"The Justice Department and the committee have been working hand-in-glove to unravel the tangles of the liquor shortage which is threatening the country in wartime with the evils of the prohibition era," Van Nuys said.

1000 Offer to Give Blood

25 Air Cadets, 2 Others Killed When Train Crushes Army Bus

Kingman, Ariz., Jan. 7 (AP).—Twenty-five aviation cadets, a gunnery instructor and their bus driver, an Army private, were killed last night in a collision of an Army bus and a fast Santa Fe freight—the worst crash in Arizona history.

In addition to the 27 dead, Kingman Army Air Field officers reported that eight other cadets were critically injured and that none of the 36 servicemen aboard the bus escaped injury.

The collision came at 9 p. m., near the entrance of the field, as the bus was returning the young fliers to the base from a gunnery range across the railroad tracks after a night gunnery mission.

Five minutes after the crash, more than 1000 servicemen at the base had volunteered their blood for the cadets. A message appealing for donors was flashed on the screen of the base theater and the rush to exits was so great military police had to be summoned to maintain order.

The only known witness of the crash, an Army guard who was the crossing watchman, is in a hospital with a complete breakdown.

A public relations officer gave this version of the crash as told by C. L. Hickey, Needles, Calif., engineer of the train:

The flagman at the crossing waved down the bus, which appeared to stop and then plunged out of control into the path of the train going at the "usual speed of about 45 miles an hour.

One hundred feet of the right of way was strewn with the bodies and the wreckage of the bus.

Allies Deny Move On Yugoslavia

As Russians Near

Foes of Axis In Rumania Seeking Peace

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 7 (AP).—As Gen. Nikolai Vatutin switched the main weight of the First Ukrainian Army's offensive to the southwest, a highly placed Balkan informant declared tonight that Rumania, directly in the path of the Soviet drive, was ready to rally behind Juliu Maniu to make peace with Russia.

He said Maniu, Rumanian anti-Nazi leader, is delaying action only because of lack of a clear guarantee from the Allies, including Russia, that Rumania's future existence is assured.

There were reports of repercussions in other Axis satellite Balkan countries as a result of the Red army drive.

Mobilization of all boys over 12 and girls over 16 for labor on "projects concerned with the nation's defense and economic life" has been ordered by Hungary, a Budapest dispatch stated.

(Bulgaria's Foreign Minister has "ordered the members of the Diplomatic Corps in Sofia to leave the city because of the danger of air raids," the British radio said.)

Rumania was pictured here as being willing to accept the cession of Bessarabia to Russia if the return of Transylvania from Hungary is certain. Germany presented Transylvania to Hungary.

(A Swiss dispatch quoted the Budapest radio as reporting a virtual ban on civilian train travel on all main lines in Rumania, obviously in connection with withdrawal and defense plans of the country since Rumanian troops still are fighting beside the Germans in Russia.

(Private sources in Switzerland further said the formal evacuation of Bessarabia had begun. The extent of the train restrictions, these quarters said, indicated the Rumanians were reckoning on the necessity of a westward withdrawal into the mountains.)

Scoff at Reports Of Major Landing; Only Specialists Sent

London, Jan. 7 (AP).—Reports tracing back to Axis-controlled Zagreb said today the Allies had landed "in force" in Yugoslavia, but Allied headquarters in Algiers denied it, and a highly-placed British source suggested all the smoke came from a spark of fact, that for some time small parties of Allied officers and specialists have been going into Yugoslavia to help the Partisans.

In possible explanation of Zagreb reports of "heavy fighting," there was a Partisan communique recounting Partisan raids and sabotage at several points and acknowledging a fighting withdrawal after six days of street battles in Banja Luka, base of the German Second Tank Army.

The periodic landings of little groups of Allied liaison officers could hardly be called troop movements, London quarters commented.

The most sensational of these unfounded reports took the form of a Reuters dispatch from Stockholm which quoted a Zagreb dispatch to the Swedish newspaper Tidningen as reporting the arrival of "several crack Allied divisions" on the Yugoslav coast. Allied headquarters in Algiers said this was "completely erroneous" and a check in Stockholm indicated the Zagreb dispatch should have been translated "Allied elite troops," or specialists, instead of divisions.

A qualified London source said such reports might represent merely a German bid for information. Swiss accounts attributed them to "invasion nerves" in Zagreb, capital of the puppet state Germany established in Croatia.

The announcement of the withdrawal from Banja Luka said the move followed the killing of 680 Germans, wounding of 700 and capturing of 720.

The communique said that 20 miles to the north Partisans successfully attacked the towns of Bosanska Gradiska, Stara Gradiska and Nova Gradiska, but gave no details.

Krivoi Rog on the south, was expected to be captured shortly as its garrison lost all hope of supply.

The Russians forced the Ingul River which runs north and south on the west side of Kirivograd and cut the rail line which runs west to Novo Ukrainka.

Advance Continued

The First Ukrainian Army in the north continued its successful advance routing German units defending Yanushpol, 16 miles west of Berdichev. Twenty-six German tanks were destroyed in this area alone. In other areas 200 German big guns and more than 300 trucks were wrecked while 92 guns and 34 stores of military supplies captured, the communique said.

Vatutin's forces, the upper arm of which was pressing into Poland, were only 13 miles east of the rail hub of Sarny in a virtually unchecked advance that captured more than 70 towns and hamlets from old Poland to the Dnieper. Sarny is a key junction on the Vilna-Rowne railway.

Among the towns captured was Lipovets, only 20 miles north of the great German communications line, the Odessa-Lwow-Warsaw railway.

In this area, too, the Russians were nearest to the Rumanian frontier on the Dniester, 80 miles to the southwest.

The fighting in old Poland was pressing through difficult country with few roads, many forests and "a multitude of lakes," a Moscow dispatch to the Russian army newspaper Red Star said.

Two Lakes Captured

To the north in the Nevel area, the Russians were pushing down the railway to Polotsk and after bloody battles captured two lakes named Big and Little Ivan, Moscow dispatches said.

North of Nevel the Russians were nearing Novosokolniki, a rail station on a line from Velikie Luki into Latvia.

German reports of the fighting in Russia were gloomy, but the most striking indication of their plight came from a Tass dispatch which said that out of 89 armored units commanded by German Field Marshal Fritz von Mannstein only 18 were left intact and in one regiment companies were reduced to scattered survivors of six or eight soldiers.

From Stockholm came additional reports of German pessimism. The newspaper Svenska Morgonbladet quoted a German military spokesman as saying there was a possibility of the German army being forced to withdraw entirely from Russia. In London, however, this was considered an extreme view for propaganda purposes since there was no indication yet that the Germans were withdrawing either from the Baltic Front or from the Dnieper bend.

Uhl Asks Maneuvers In Germany After War

Omaha, Jan. 7 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Frederick E. Uhl, at a farewell press conference before his departure for Atlanta, Ga., where he will head the Fourth Service Command, declared today that he believes U. S. troops should hold maneuvers in Germany after the war "just to show those guys how tough we are."

Uhl, who has been commanding officer of the Seventh Service Command in Omaha since 1941, advocated similar treatment for Japan.

verging Allied columns. The Americans who seized Mount Maio were less than 4 miles from Cervaro, which lies in the Cassino plain 3 miles above San Vittore and between that village and Cassino.

Although the Fifth Army's 10-mile wide offensive had gained from 1 to 4 miles since the jump-off early Wednesday, there yet was no indication of a substantial breakthrough. The Germans were retreating from one defense line to the next after making the Allies pay the highest possible price.

Capturing San Vittore was a matter of killing the last German in each wine cellar and pillbox, for the Nazis refused to surrender and fought savagely to the last. Neither side could use artillery for fear of hitting its own men.

The full striking power of the Allies had not yet been brought into play, as the tactical air forces had been hampered by bad weather.

Only a few A-36 Invaders and P-40 Warhawks were over the front yesterday, dive-bombing and shooting up enemy troop concentrations around Cervaro and Aquino, just behind the battle line, and blasting motor convoys and trains east of Rome. Two Nazi planes were destroyed over central Italy. The Allies lost none.

Snow and cold continued to retard the progress of the Eighth Army on the Adriatic end of the line, though Indian troops made a short advance west of San Tommaso.

Burma Chinese Begin Assault To Aid Road

New Delhi, Jan. 7 (AP).—American-trained Chinese troops have crossed to the east bank of the upper Chindwin River in a fresh offensive to clear the way for the steady advancement of the new Burma Road, it was disclosed today.

The operation was supported by a four-day attack of fighters and fighter-bombers of the U. S. Army Air Force starting January 1, a communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters stated.

Exact location of the drive was not given, but it was announced that it was in the Yupbang area. The scene is in rugged northern Burma in the Hukawng Valley area, roughly 100 miles northwest of the Japanese base at Myitkyina, terminus of the Mandalay Railroad.

A continuing drive eastward could unite the Chinese in Burma and in Yunnan Province of southwest China.

Myitkyina itself was a target for American bombers which scored many hits on the airfield, the communique said.

Meanwhile, it announced that United States heavy bombers raided the Japanese-held port of Aykab January 2, followed by an RAF night plastering of the Hemo airfield and Prome railway yards, and that Allied planes carried out both strategic and tactical attacks on rail, road and river communications in much of Burma.

Northwest of Akyab, in the Mayu Mountains, Allied ground forces made further unspecified progress after beating off Japanese counterattack.

Poles Take Pessimistic View On Reconciliation With Russia

London, Jan. 7 (AP).—The Polish underground continues to fight the Germans, but its members become prisoners of war when taken by the Red army," a Polish spokesman declared tonight as the Poles took a frankly pessimistic view of reaching a reconciliation with Russia.

This spokesman did not say whether he knew of any such cases already but in response to an inquiry said he thought Polish guerillas would be taken prisoner when the Russians reached the territories in which they were operating.

Although a Polish government declaration two days ago and Premier Stanislaw Mikolajcyk's broadcast to the underground last night intimated that Poland was willing to try for an understanding, a spokesman in London said Poland was unwilling to give up territory in the east in return for promises of compensation at Germany's expense in the west.

Separate Questions

This spokesman said the Polish government considered eastern and western territorial questions separately.

Russia has given many indications that she does not recognize the prewar eastern border of Poland but regards as Russian territory the eastern half of the country, which she occupied in September, 1939, in agreement with Germany.

Premier Marshal Stalin, so far as is known in London, is insistent on settling boundary disputes only after military victory.

In this connection there was some suggestion that the border question could be ignored for the present in some arrangement permitting cooperation against the Germans by the Red army and the Polish underground.

"Full understanding between the Polish and Russian governments would not be a condition of the struggle against the Germans, which is still going on and will continue, but would be only the basis for complete coordination between that struggle and the Russian action," said the semiofficial Polish daily paper Dziennik Polski."

Benes, Premier to Meet

An authoritative Polish spokesman said nevertheless that he was pessimistic about chances for an agreement stemming from a projected meeting in the next day or so between Premier Mikolajczyk and President Edouard Benes of the Czechoslovak government-in-exile.

It was learned today that Benes talked to Mikolajczyk before his recent trip to Moscow to sign a Czech-Russian treaty. He is to see British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden before again seeing Mikolajczyk, who is expected to go to Washington soon.

Poland's Foreign Minister Tadeusz Romer saw Eden yesterday.

Navy Grows As Japs Hide, Knox Asserts

Secretary of the Navy Knox said yesterday it is "foolish" for anyone to assume that the Japanese fleet is afraid to fight—it probably remains in hiding "because the time doesn't suit their purpose."

He added at a news conference that the enemy presumably is "waiting for a time they will have a better chance, they hope."

"But while they remain cooped up, our ships, men, planes, are growing and when they do come out there can be only one ultimate result."

Knox made his statement after reviewing recent activity in the South and Central Pacific areas.

Fliers Dominate

American Army, Navy and Marine fliers are "continuing complete domination."

"Uniformly enemy losses conservatively run better than six to one," he remarked.

The Navy Secretary added that "the little barges" which the Japanese are using to move men and supplies "are getting knocked off pretty regularly" by American planes and motor torpedo boats.

Knox also mentioned that Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of the South Pacific area, who is now in the United States, is expected to come to Washington for a few days of discussions. He quoted an estimate made by Halsey that 10 Japanese have been killed for every American lost in the Pacific area.

Jap Losses Heavy

"I have been doing a little figuring," Knox said, adding that Halsey's figures might be low. He cited the operations in which American forces captured the Cape Gloucester area. There, he said, 2100 dead Japanese have been counted, while only 117 Americans have been killed, or a ratio of "almost 20 to 1."

He also cited the lan doperations on Guadalcanal, saying the Japanese dead there in land operations alone totaled 17,330 while American total dead in land operations, including airmen, totaled only 1950. In addition, in the Guadalcanal operations, he said it has been estimated that between 25,000 and 28,000 Japanese troops were lost in transports sunk in the Guadalcanal area.

Soldiers Declared Eager for Ballot

fore enacting State measures.

Seven of the first Governors to reply said they had called or would call special sessions of their State Legislatures, while another said he would do so "if necessary."

Six others said they would take no steps until Congress acts, and seven indicated they are standing on present State laws.

Green, who has called a meeting of his full committee for Tuesday to consider the new compromise Green-Lucas war ballot bill, is expected to cite this diverse pattern of State action as the principal argument for a uniform Federal ballot.

Plainly in the offing was an attempt by proponents of the strictly State-controlled soldier voting measure already passed by the Senate to block a motion to call up the new Federal measure.

However, Senator Eastland (Democrat) of Mississippi, chief author of the Senate-passed "States' rights" substitute, denied any knowledge of the move. Eastland said he had not had time to study the Green-Lucas Federal war ballot compromise.

"I will vote," said Senator Eastland, "for any soldier-voting measure that does not deprive the States of control of elections and the qualifications of voters and will not do violence to the Constitution.

"Any bill that fails to meet those standards I will oppose and will discuss at some length on the Senate floor if it is called up."

The new Green-Lucas compromise has stripped the proposed Federal war ballot commission of controversial powers and imposes no penalties on the States for failure to validate proposed uniform Federal war ballots.

But it does maintain in effect the 1942 Federal law waiving State poll tax and registration requirements for servicemen, set aside by the Senate-passed States' rights substitute.

West Virginia meanwhile became the second State to pass State soldier voting legislation, allowing West Virginians in the armed services to cast ballots wherever they may be. The first State service voting law, passed by Georgia, was signed yesterday by Gov. Ellis Arnall. Georgia Secretary of State John B. Wilson said copies have been requested by about 25 other States.

Furloughs Urged for Men Long Overseas

By the Associated Press

Amid reports that the Army is moving to relieve troops in isolated outposts, Senate Democrats and Republicans joined yesterday in urging establishment of a furlough system for battle-weary men long overseas.

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio told a reporter he believed the War Department should make some provision for short furloughs for men who had seen at least two years of foreign service. He suggested the possibility of a rotation system which would let one man out of four in a designated unit come home for a month or more. On his return, another would be given leave.

Senator Radcliffe (Democrat) of Maryland said he, too, felt that arrangements could be made for furloughs that would not interfere with the war effort.

Many Garrisons Replaced

Congress heard informally that the Army already has acted to replace many of its garrisons in Alaska, the Caribbean, Iceland and other outposts in this hemisphere.

Some servicemen in Sicily, Italy and the Southwest Pacific also have been returned to the United States, but the percentage is said to be extremely small.

Members of Congress said their mail is full of appeals from parents for furloughs for their sons, but most legislators thought no attempt would be made to enact legislation on the subject. The general disposition was to leave the decision to the high command.

Shipping Major Problem

Taft said his proposal for a furlough after two years of overseas fighting probably would affect few troops in the European theater, but might give relief to a large number in the Pacific.

Both Taft and Radcliffe said the chief problem was use of shipping that otherwise might be carrying troops or supplies. Taft added that there also was the question of whether experienced fighting units should be broken up.

Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah declared that he would like to see some arrangements made for furloughs but "when they can be spared is a matter for the military authorities to decide."

answers to the questions. Justice Eicher found that he knew the answers and that they were pertinent to the inquiry which has bordered on the activities of groups here who were close to congressional sources and flooded the Nation with propaganda before and after the war began.

Repeats Testimony

Stewart appeared before the grand jury in the morning and repeated his previous testimony that he had no idea where the money came from. He said it was later used to form the Lake Geneva Herald, a weekly newspaper, which was sent all over the country and to soldiers in outposts elsewhere. This newspaper was critical of the conduct of the Administration in foreign policy and national defense.

Stewart's attorney, Warren Magee, argued that the court was constrained not to hold the publisher in contempt until he was given a full hearing. Magee said Stewart was put in the position of being ordered to tell what the Government thought to be the truth, based on other testimony.

In reality, Stewart was put in the position of sticking to his story of ignorance and going to jail for contempt of court or telling the source of the money, the biggest sum to enter the sedition case, and face a charge of perjury.

Judge, Attorneys Meet

Stewart, according to Rogge, was not charged with perjury but with being a contumacious and obstructive witness before the grand jury.

Justice Eicher met with Rogge and other Justice Department attorneys late yesterday to iron out problems and arrange for early pleadings so the case can be brought to trial. Rogge wants the trial to begin in March.

Justice Eicher ordered that all defendants be arraigned and file motions before January 22 and to have the motions disposed of on January 31.

War Advanced Rocket Plane By 50 Years, Says Rickenbacker

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker said today that "if the war lasts another five years" the new British-American jet-propelled airplane will change the whole course of civilization with respect to transportation and travel.

"As far as progress is concerned," the world war ace declared, "it has brought us 50 years farther than we would have been had the war not occurred. There is no question about its prospects and possibilities."

Rickenbacker said that while the plane is an outstanding contribution to aviation, he doubted that it would become a great factor in winning the war because its development presents too many problems.

He said he thought the war would be over before these problems were solved.

The same thing applies, he declared, to Germany's purported new secret weapon. The aviator expressed confidence the Allies "are qualified to match any weapon the Germans produce."

Wright Gives Opinion

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 7 (AP).—Orville Wright, coinventor of the first successful heavier-than-air plane, said today he believed the new jet-propelled plane announced by the Army Air Forces, never would compete with the conventional motor-type.

He did believe, however, that the jet-propulsion idea fits into a very definite place with American Air Force plans.

"Its greatest advantage," he said, "is the fact it produces a great amount of power for a few seconds."

Widespread use of the jet motor, Wright believes, "is still an awful long way off."

flight of a heavier-than-air plane, Wright discussed the possibilities of new types of engines for aircraft. At that time the jet-propulsion method, as well as the turbo-motors were suggested.

The 72-year-old inventor said that instead of different types of motors modern airplanes could be cleaned up aero-dynamically, eliminating resistance, thus with lesser gas loads planes could go the same distance at greater speeds.

service will be classified 4-F.

The "Navy" group will include both Marines and Coast Guard, it was said, and the men will be sent to Navy recruiting offices.

Three Types of Calls

Thus, after February 1, calls to local boards will be for a definite number of Army general-service, Army limited-service and Navy men instead of one general call for men as at present.

Although the "screening examination" is officially abolished, a registrant who believes he has a disqualifying physical defect may still request and get an exam by a local board physician. If he is obviously unfit, he will be rejected and not have to undergo the complete physical given by the armed forces.

On the other hand, any man who wishes may sign a request for immediate induction at any time prior to his preinduction physical and be inducted immediately after passing the exam.

Test Center Slated At Fort Myer

Selective Service officials explained that under the new system, Fort Myer induction station will become an "examination station." No inductees will be sworn in there except those who waive the stay of service and volunteer for immediate induction after acceptance.

Under the new plan, District boards will send larger daily groups to Fort Myer than the present approximately 150. Although local headquarters of Selective Service was unable to disclose the new number, an estimate was given that the daily total might reach 275.

Union Chiefs Order Ship Workers Back

Knox Demanded End of Stoppage in Philadelphia Crisis

Philadelphia, Jan. 7 (AP).—Seventeen thousand idle employes of the Cramp Shipbuilding Co. were ordered back to work tonight by their National Union officers, who said any member failing to return "will be aiding the enemies of our union and our country . . ."

The order went out from John Green, president, and Philip Van Gelder, secretary-treasurer of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding workers approoximately 24 hours after the union's local 42 voted to remain away from their jobs until "all grievances" against the company were settled or the Navy assumed control.

Knox Demand Sent

In Washington, the Navy disclosed that Secretary Knox had dispatched a telegram earlier to both the management and the union saying the work stoppage was prolonging "the time necessary for victory."

It made public the following text of the message:

"As Secretary of the Navy primarily responsible to the Nation for directing the naval effort in the prosecution of the war and for providing adequate equipment to our naval forces, it is my firm opinion that the work stoppage initiated at the Cramp Shipbuilding Co. increases the hazards of our war effort and prolongs the time necessary for victory.

"No provocation in labor relations can justify a reduction of the full measure of production which is our obligation to our field forces. I therefore demand as a condition of loyalty to their country the immediate return to work of all employes of the company. It is expected that both management and labor will apply promptly the procedures established between themselves or by Government agencies to resolve their controversies without interruption of production."

Yard Idle Two Days

Production at the yard has been at a standstill since yesterday.

"The Cramp shipyard is engaged in construction of naval ships vital to the war effort and this union will not sanction or condone any action which would delay construction of these ships in the slightest degree," the officers said in a statement issued at their Camden, N. J., office.

The national officers' action followed a War Labor Board telegram urging Green "to take every available action within the framework of your organization to require the striking employes to return to their jobs in compliance with the no-strike pledge of your organization."

Painters Pay Involved

Earlier, Rear Admiral Bryson Bruce, supervisor of shipbuilding at Cramp's, said the stoppage was "not to the best interests of anyone except the enemy." Referring to charges by the local that workers were "locked out" following a dispute involving 42 painters, Bruce said the plant gates "have never been and will not be closed."

The work stoppage began early yesterday after the company dismissed 42 painters who refused to use sprayguns instead of brushes, contending that the premium pay for spraygun work was too low.

It Helps Nature

Navy Speeds Burn Cures With Plasma

By the Associated Press

Two Navy doctors took a tip from Mother Nature and developed a new surface treatment for burns which they said yesterday is better than any of the "many methods in vogue during the last two years."

The method involves application of a medicated solution of human blood plasma directly to the surface of the burn—thereby providing another role in medicine for that blood derivative.

Nature Aided by Discovery

Plasma has been used and will continue to be used intravenously for the relief of "shock" due to burns and other wounds. In that procedure plasma is injected into the veins to restore the volume of lost blood fluid.

Comdr. Melvin D. Abbott and Lieut. John R. Gepfert declared in the Naval Medical Bulletin they had employed plasma in surface treatment after reviewing these observations:

Whenever the human body suffers a surface burn, nature seeks to compensate for the damage by causing the body to give off serum, the main constituent of human plasma.

Blisters are formed, with the serum inside them providing a protective covering for surviving tissue beneath and allowing it to regenerate.

Even if the blisters are broken, the serum spreads and covers the injured surface, serving as a protective and soothing layer of insulation.

Sulfa in Mixture

But the doctors said the usefulness of this protective mechanism of nature has been limited so far because the body makes no provision to protect against infection that may set in.

So they went nature one better. They took some donated human plasma (to provide the serum needed) and added to it a 5 per cent solution of sulfanilamide, a potent killer of bacteria. A thickening substance was added to make the solution easy to apply to the surface of burns.

Reporting they had applied a thick layer of the material to 12 second degree burns and that the average time of healing was five days, the doctor said:

"The results were very definitely better than those obtained by the use of any one of the many methods in vogue during the past two years. This conclusion is based upon wide experience in the treatment of burns by tanning, ointment, jelly, triple dye, and saline (salt solution) wet pack methods."

The formation of new skin was rapid, they said, and unburned skin adjacent to injured areas retained a normal appearance.

Rail Unions Wary of Added Board Powers

The special railroad emergency board appointed to settle the nonoperating wage dispute has received a presidential grant of more authority than the 15 unions involved were willing to concede to President Roosevelt, an informed official revealed yesterday.

The board was appointed after the nonoperating unions refused to permit the President to consider a contention by the carriers that a 10-to-4-cents-an-hour sliding scale wage award should be reviewed in arbitrating the union's demand for overtime pay.

The new board, which is composed of the same three persons who handed down the 10-to-4-cent award, has been granted authority to review the carriers' contentions, it was learned, thus making it possible for them to integrate the overtime settlement with the sliding scale award, thereby reducing the possible total the 1,100,000 workers involved might receive.

Hearings to Begin Monday

The board, headed by Justice Elwyn R. Shaw, Springfield, Ill., will begin formal meetings on the case Monday. It is expected that nonoperating union chiefs will appear before it and insist that it restrict testimony to the overtime issue.

"If they decide to accept other evidence, then we won't have to accept their decision," one union official pointed out. "You know, we are not going to let this board do what we refused to let President Roosevelt do. If they try to do a job on us, we won't take it."

The board is the third of a string of emergency boards appointed to settle the wage dispute since it started in September, 1942. Members of the board met with War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes yesterday. In addition to Shaw, the board is composed of Walter Clephane, Washington, D. C., attorney, and Judge Richard F. Mitchell, Fort Dodge, Iowa.

The presidential order appointing the board authorized it to act under the Railway Labor Act, the Stabilization Act and the First War Powers Act. The unions have contended that creation of the board was tantamount to a violation of the Railway Labor Act because no provision was made for mediation of the dispute by the National Mediation Board as provided under the act. The union officials pointed out that the board's expenses were not being provided out of Mediation Board funds because the board has refused to recognize it, but from other funds, presumably those available to Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson.

Voice Similar Complaint

A similar complaint was voiced by chiefs of the three operating brotherhoods—firemen, conductors, switchmen—who have thus far refused to permit President Roosevelt to arbitrate their dispute.

In a formal statement, they complained that the Government has taken the case out from under the Railway Labor Act which "has been heralded as a model law for the efficient handling of labor controversies."

They charged a "complete absence of any single authority with whom we can discuss the pending wage problems."

"We have been informed by Government sources that negotiation and agreement between the carriers and employe organizations are foreclosed, except that agreements now reached may establish conditions to be effective after termination of Government control," the statement said. "Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, in charge of railroad operation for the Army, has disclaimed any intention of taking any hand whatever in the determination of our wages during Government operation."

Allege Contradictions

The union chiefs also charged that "contradictory interpretations" of the meaning of a presidential award to the trainmen and engineers, two operating unions who accepted the President's arbitration offer were preventing settlement of their dispute.

They pointed out that the award has been construed in some quarters as a freeze of all railroad wages until the termination of hostilities by presidential proclamation or by Congress. Hostilities were terminated officially 18 months after the end of World War I, they asserted.

"Presumably, only the President may authoritatively construe his decision, and no word of any construction of this ambiguous paragraph has been brought to our attention," the three brotherhood leaders said.

New Tax Bill Reaches Hilt, George Asserts

In the face of new Treasury charges that the Senate tax bill is more than eight billion dollars shy of revenue needed and fosters "war profiteering," Chairman Walter F. George of the Senate Finance Committee last night declared the measure provides all the taxes the traffic will bear.

In a radio speech, George said many in Congress "believe that an additional tax burden upon the same taxpayers of eight billion dollars would shatter the public morale."

Relief for Profiteers

In Indianapolis earlier, Treasury General Counsel Randolph Paul told the Indiana State Bar Association that "what started out to be a revenue bill is now in large part a measure to appropriate public funds for 'relief' of war profiteers and others."

Paul attacked the bill not only as revenue-shy and inadequate to meet inflationary measures, but hit at amendments to the war contracts renegotiation law as "emasculation" of the renegotiation statute: "Their adoption would make it worse than nothing, it would leave a facade of war profit control with no reality behind it."

Conferences in Progress

George made no direct reference to the Renegotiation Act amendments, which a committee minority report also criticized as abetting "a new crop of war millionaires."

Conferences have been in progress between George and renegotiating agencies ever since the committee approved the changes.

As to war profits, George said only: "I think I can assure you that there is little opportunity for making inordinate profits out of war when corporate war profits are taxed at 95 per cent and individual incomes are taxed by the Federal Government alone as high as 90 per cent, as will be the case under the Senate Finance Committee bill."

Other Methods Cited

The Georgia Democrat estimated the Senate bill would yield $2,275,600,000, and said there was general agreement in Congress "that raising more than this amount, without resort to new methods, would disrupt our economy not only for the present, but for years to come; moreover, we might make it extremely difficult for our returning soldiers to find employment."

Tin to Stay On Critical List, Says WPB

By Walter Wood

An Office of War Information statement that tin is expected to come off the critical list this year was denounced yesterday by Erwin Vogelsang as being "as wrong as anything the OWI ever said."

Vogelsang, director of the tin and lead division of the War Production Board, is one of the country's outstanding experts on tin.

"There is not a chance of the tin stockpile ever being increased while the Japs are in the Dutch East Indies," Voglesang declared. "Tin will be needed as much in 1944—and 1945—as it was in 1939," he said.

The OWI announcement that tin would come off the critical list in 1944 was made in a story for release in the morning papers of yesterday. It was issued as the "first official statement on curtailments of war production."

Asked where he got his information, the author of the OWI report said it came from "the Army and the War Production Board" and since the statement was approved by WPB he considered it official.

Comments on what the tin stock pile actually is today include the following:

"Extremely comfortable!" "It could last 18 months!" "Good for three years!" "It's a military secret!"

Tin Director Vogelsang, who probably knows more about it than any other Government official, is remaining silent on exactly what the size of the tin stock pile is. He has, however, called upon WPB's salvage division to step up "as much as possible" the tin-can collecting campaign, one of the methods relied upon to build up the stock pile.

Efforts of householders in saving the tin cans are as necessary now as they were last year, he declared, and emphasized that the tin stock pile was always decreasing.

"It never can increase as long as the war goes on," he said.

Ease Iron, Steel Contracts

By the Associated Press

Prohibitions against the use of iron and steel in 1200 of the commonest civilian products—many of which have gone completely out of production—will be lifted soon except for about 300 of the least essential items, it was learned yesterday.

War Production Board sources disclosed plans for a drastic revision, perhaps this month, of WPB's famed "Order M-126." It not only has barred iron and steel in a long list of goods, but also any substitute metals except gold and silver.

The ban has been one of the severest of wartime curbs on industry since May, 1942. When he issued it, WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson said the action, together with an accompanying check on nonwar construction, would "change the face of American industry."

By the allocation of materials to manufacturers, WPB will continue to govern production and prevent a runaway boom in civilian goods. Further, officials said they expected additional controls would be laid down to check civilian output in tight labor areas.

The list of goods in which iron and steel were banned covers 400 types of products, some 1200 individual items, and many thousand different styles, models and sizes. Included were coat-hangers, bath tubs, compacts, flashlight tubes, ice cream freezers, laundry trays, lipstick holders, house numbers, parking meters, automatic pencils, match boxes, mop wringers, pie plates and shower stalls.

WPA's steel division recommended that the order be wiped out entirely, on grounds that the improvement in steel supply makes its continued existence unnecessary.

The removal of many items from the banned list—and there was no indication just which products would be removed—would not necessarily mean a prompt resumption of production. Subsequent action would have to be taken to allot materials for them.

However, manufacturers could make use of materials not under the allotment system, as well as a good deal of metal left over from arms cutbacks, materials partly fabricated for a special purpose but not used, and rejected materials.

Bill May Ease Winter Shad Problem Here

Congress will soon have to lay aside the grave national and international problems growing out of the war to decide whether the people of Washington can eat shad in December.

The momentous question will bob up in Congress because it alone has the authority to decree the kind of fish the people here can eat and when they can eat it.

Already the first steps have been taken to bring the shad problem before the House and Senate, and the reason for it is this:

Florida fishermen last month ran up against a 43-year-old law when they attempted to unload some fresh winter shad on the Washington market—a statute which forbids the sale or even "exposure" of such fish or other of the herring species between April 10 and January 1.

The dilemma of the fishermen was called to the attention of Senator Andrews (Democrat) of Florida, who in turn appealed to Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee to do something about it. McCarran asked Corporation Counsel Keech to write a bill and he would introduce it.

The measure will amend the old law and permit shad to be sold here in December—the month in which they are plentiful in Florida waters—and from then on until April 10.

Keech's principal assistant, Vernon E. West who was engaged in the fish hatching business in Delaware about 40 years ago, said he believed the almost forgotten shad law was enacted to protect such fish in Potomac waters during their annual spring run from the Atlantic Ocean for spawning. In those days, he recalled, Florida fishermen did not ship to Northern markets.

Flood Menace at Peace Cross To Be Put Before Congress

Congressional aid in correcting flood conditions at the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, Md., as an "immediate wartime necessity," is to be sought by the Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations.

The action was voted after it was reported that the rains Tuesday night, which flooded Bladensburg and cut off the Baltimore blvd. and the Defense highway, had caused traffic, including several Army convoys, to be rerouted.

The federation urged that Congressman Lansdale G. Sasscer of Prince Georges be requested to bring to the attention of the Army authorities the extreme urgency of an immediate correction of the flood menace in the Anacostia Basin.

Louis Granados pointed out that a flood on the Defense highway would force Washington-bound convoys to be rerouted four miles over narrow and dangerous roads, and traffic on the Baltimore boulevard would be forced over Rhode Island and New Hampshire aves. extended, both two-lane highways.

Fred W. Gast, treasurer of the organization and an engineer with the Treasury Department, stated, "the low elevation of land at the Peace Cross is only 7 to 19 feet above sea level, which is approximately 3 to 5 feet lower than the top of the retaining wall at the mouth of the Anacostia. Thirty per cent of flood conditions in this area is caused by high tide in the Potomac River.

"In order to remedy the situation," continued Gast, "the land would have to be raised 3 feet higher than the sea wall since this would give a fall of only 3 feet to the junction of the Anacostia and Potomac Rivers. The siting of the river channel will require the dredging of a new channel to provide a sufficient run-off for any flood waters."

Baruch Drafts Conversion Plan

planning openly.

Virtually every Government agency has assigned officials to the job of postwar planning, but most agencies have kept their plans out of the spotlight on the ground that their discussion might detract attention from the main war production job ahead.

Baruch and Hancock, it was reported, have become convinced as a result of their studies that war conversion problems are of an importance second only to actual war production plans.

The proposed contract termination clause would enable a manufacturer to receive payment for all work already performed plus an allowance to cover a portion of the profit which he might have made on the unfinished work.

At the same time, a sliding scale method of liquidating other contract termination claims was said to be favored, permitting some producers to receive up to 90 per cent of their total claims, pending detailed negotiation.

Rival Unions Sign 'No-Raid' Pact

zations has established a contractual relationship with an employer or has been certified as the collective bargaining agency by the NLRB, the other organization shall not in any way interfere with this relationship by having its officers, representatives or members solicit or accept membership applications or authorization cards; or cause or promote campaigns of any nature designed to disturb such relationship.

"It is the hope of both organizations that this policy will result in a better understanding between them and will eventually lead to a united labor movement and make possible the further expansion of the trade union movement among the unorganized workers."

The agreement was signed for the machinists by Harvey Brown, president; Eric Peterson and D. S. Lyons, international officers, and for the auto workers by R. J. Thomas, president; Walter P. Reuther and Richard Frankensteen, vice presidents, and George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer.

A UAW spokesman in Chicago stated that the pact would promote stability of relationships in all aircraft plants where the NAW and IAM have contracts.

Brown, asked in Washington whether amalgamation of the two unions was now a possibility, replied that the subject was not discussed.

Thomas had announced the Chicago board meeting for the purpose of "putting some steam" behind the union's drive to break the Little Steel wage formula, but the spokesman said consideration of wages had been postponed until today.

Navy Patrol Ship St. Augustine Sunk in Collision

Philadelphia, Jan. 7 (AP).—The Navy patrol ship St. Augustine, once a $1,250,000 pleasure yacht used by heiress Barbara Hutton, sank in the Atlantic Ocean 60 miles southeast of Cape May, N. J., last night after a collision with a merchant ship, the Fourth Naval District announced today.

The Navy did not disclose whether any crewmen were missing, but said Navy and Coast Guard vessels put out to pick up "survivors." The extent of damage to the merchant ship, not otherwise identified, was "undetermined," he Navy said. Both ships were blacked out.

House Unit Asks Air Lines Their Views on Boundary Bill

By James E. Chinn

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee announced yesterday he had asked officials of the air lines operating in and out of the Washington National Airport whether they had any objections to a bill now pending before the House which would fix a new boundary line between the District and Virginia and place the airport area in that State.

The information was sought in view of Randolph's plans to call the measure up for consideration in the House at the first opportunity after Congress reconvenes Monday. The air line authorities were urged to submit their report by that time.

No D. C. Tax Loss

The Congressman's first attempt to have the legislation considered in the House last November 30 was blocked when questions were raised whether the District would suffer the loss of tax revenues by a change in the boundary. Since then Attorney General Biddle and two District officials—Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent—have given Randolph assurance the effect on taxes would be negligible.

The new boundary would be fixed as the present mean high water mark on the Virginia side of the Potomac instead of the high water mark as it existed in 1791 when the District was created. In the area between these two lines, in addition to the airport, are the War Department development in connection with the Pentagon and part of the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

Air Lines Objected

Three years ago when a House District subcommittee first gave serious attention to the boundary bill opposition developed to location of the airport in Virginia. Some of the air lines complained that the change would face them with a higher tax on gasoline, and the restaurant at the airport would not be permitted to sell whisky and other drinks with a high alcohol content. Virginia laws, it was pointed out, impose a 5-cents-a-gallon tax on aviation motor fuel, whereas in the District it is 2 cents, and prohibit the sale of liquor by the drink.

Randolph already has been warned by Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which has long fought for adjustment of the century-old boundary dispute that any move to revise the bill to place the airport in the District would "kill" it.

Path Cleared For Chicago as GOP Selection

By D. Harold Oliver
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wendell L. Willkie's expressed willingness to hold the 1944 Republican nominating convention in Chicago cleared the way last night for that city's easy selection and party members are already warming up on platform discussions.

The only other possible stumbling block to harmony at next week's convention-planning meeting of the party's national committee in Chicago, as seen here by some party chieftains, is the method of setting up an arrangements committee.

Senator Taft of Ohio has said that certain unidentified individuals may try to force election of this group through the national committee rather than the national chairman, who usually makes the choices.

Willkie, 1940 Republican presidential choice at Philadelphia, made his no-objections-to-Chicago statement in an interview yesterday at New York. Heretofore his supporters have opposed Chicago on the ground that it was a prewar isolationist center; Willkie and the Chicago Tribune share a mutual dislike, largely because of foreign policy differences.

Foreign Policy in Forefront

Foreign policy matters are in the forefront of platform talk now.

Replying to queries by a Willkie supporter as to whether the "Mackinac Charter" adopted by the Republicans' postwar advisory council in September has been pigeonholed, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, a council member, said that it is far from dead.

The Senator, chairman of the council's committee on foreign policy had a prominent part in writing the peace plank finally adopted at Mackinac Island. He said he would call a meeting of his committee in advance of the national convention to "bring down to date" the plank's phraseology.

To Be Given Committee

This and pronouncements on domestic questions will be turned over to the convention's resolutions committee for their consideration in framing a 1944 platform.

The GOP National Committee will meet Monday and Tuesday in Chicago to choose a convention site and Chairman Harrison E. Spangler was in the Illinois metropolis yesterday to arrange for the two-day session of national committee members and State chairmen and vice chairmen. More than 200 Republican leaders have been asked to attend.

Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin of Connecticut, a Willkie supporter, raised the question about the Mackinac agreements. In an interview in New York he said he was less concerned about who his party's standard bearer would be than "in knowing what it says on the standard he is carrying," and then added:

"I thought that we drafted at Mackinac some resolutions on national and international policy that made common sense. Nothing has been done about them since. I regret that because I thought the Republicans took a forthright stand, I wonder if they have been pigeonholed by the high command of the Republican Party. I hope not."

Vandenberg Disagrees.

Asked about this, Vandenberg recalled that it was announced at Mackinac that his committee and others would meet in advance of the convention to consider any plank revisions deemed warranted.

He said his group certainly would meet and that Governor Baldwin and others would be asked to submit their views.

"As for the Governor failing to find anything happening since the Mackinac gathering," the Senator added, "he might take a look at the final Senate resolution on foreign policy and see how closely it parallels Mackinac."

The resolution adopted by the Senate 85 to 5 on November 5 with the support of 51 Democrats and 34 Republicans calls for the United States to work through constitutional processes and with other free and sovereign nations for establishment of international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world.

Indorsing the peace principle enunciated at the Moscow conference, it goes on to say that a general international organization for the maintenance of peace should be created at the earliest practicable date and be open to membership by all states, large and small.

The Mackinac foreign policy resolution declared in favor of responsible participation by the United States in postwar cooperative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to attain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world.

Directories Seen as Aid To Car Pools

Formation of car-sharing pools is expected to be expedited next week when transportation officers in District office buildings are provided with directories listing names and telephone numbers of persons having to do with forming car pools and authorizing gas allotments for them, F. W. Lovejoy, executive secretary of the regional defense transportation committee, announced yesterday. The directories are expected to encourage cooperation between offices in forming pools, he said.

Lovejoy announced also that a central office is expected to open soon where persons employed in small firms not having transportation officers can apply to form car pools.

Bill Increases Annapolis Bids

Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee yesterday began drafting a bill to increase the number of appointments from the District to West Point and Annapolis.

Existing law limits the number to West Point to six and to Annapolis five, far less than many States with a population lower than that of the District. The legislation to be sponsored by McCarran will be designed to remove this inequity.

Data furnished McCarran show that the total appointments, including those to both academies, range from 32 to 45 in some of the States whose population does not exceed that of the District. Montana leads the list with 25 appointments to Annapolis and 20 to West Point. The other States with a total of 20 or more appointments include New Hampshire, Rhode Island, North and South Dakota, Idaho, New Mexico, Arizona and Utah.

Mrs. Hoover Succumbs to Heart Attack

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of former President Hoover, died unexpectedly last night in their apartment in the Waldorf Towers, New York, of an acute heart attack. She was 68.

She was stricken just as her husband was bidding her goodby, preparatory to leaving for a dinner. She died a few minutes later. Mrs. Hoover apparently was in her usual health and had returned to her apartment from a concert a short time before she was stricken.

Her two sons, Allan Hoover, rancher, and Herbert Hoover, jr., a radio engineer, both in California, were notified of their mother's death at once.

Mrs. Hoover's death leaves only six surviving former First Ladies. They are the former Mrs. Grover Cleveland, now Mrs. Thomas J. Preston; Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, second wife of President Wilson; Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison.

Mrs. Hoover's maiden name was Lou Henry, the daughter of Charles D. Henry, a banker of Waterloo, Iowa. From the time she sailed to China in 1898 with her husband the day after they were married, Mrs. Hoover devoted herself to his career. When public service drew him to the war stage in 1914, she became leader of an organization that helped thousands of stranded Americans. While he directed the Nation's war diet at home, and throughout his swift rise to post of power as Food Administrator, Secretary of Commerce and President, she always remained at his side as his helpmate.

She was keenly interested in activities of Girl Scouts and was national president of the organization from 1921 to 1924 and again in 1935. At the time of her death she was a member of the Palo Alto Girl Scout Council.

Mrs. Hoover wore no jewels and used no cosmetics. Her shoes were low-heeled and her morning clothes were simply tailored. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hoover were badly misunderstood by varying types of the social world here. At least they did not care for crowds. Both admitted that in a sense they were introverts in the most extraverted job in the United States. They were shy people, their friends said, not precisely at home in the White House.

Herbert Hoover was relieved of his public burdens March 4, 1933, when he and Mrs. Hoover turned over the White House to President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

not to run through any red lights and not to violate any traffic rules.

"I drove through Colmar Manor and Hyattsville and a half a mile from the Maryland State Police barracks, they made me stop the car.

Even Searched Socks

"There they took about $38 or $40 from me, some of it belonging to the company. They even made me take off my shoes and searched my socks to be sure I had no more money hidden.

"The black haired one drew a blackjjack and said he might as well kill me there and get rid of me. But, the blond man said that I had been a good fellow and he did not think it necessary.

"There the black-haired guy got on the back seat with Miss Platt while the blond one got in the front seat, took my cap, broke the front mirror and the dome light, and started driving.

"He drove to Baltimore and stopped at a tavern and then went to a filling station, where he used my money and my "A" coupons for my own car, to get 15 gallons of gasoline.

Nudge Now and Then

"He then told me to drive and to head for New York. Every so often I could feel myself nudged with a gun.

"I took the longest route, in the hopes something would happen. At Havre de Grace the blond paid the toll charges with my money.

"I drove through Pennsylvania and through the town of Upper Darby, where my sister lives, thinking that they might be willing to throw me out there.

"They made me stop the car within two blocks of my sister's home while the blonde guy went into a dinette and got two sandwiches for all hands.

"Gosh, mister, who could eat

HARRY HERMAN CORMAN,

when they were in a fix like that?

"But we drove on into New York and I was in hopes we would run out of gasoline and I thought we would in the Holland Tunnel. But we did not, and the blond guy paid the toll charge there—still with my money—and we went on until we reached the Manhattan Bridge.

Tip With Own Money

"There the blond man told me to buy the gas myself and handed me some money. When the station attendant brought the change, the blond guy told me to keep it.

"It was still my money, although it was only 25 cents.

"The blond man promised he would give me the car and a tank full of gas when we were in Brooklyn. They made me stop on some side street and the blond man made me crawl out on the right side of the car.

"I pleaded with them that I should be allowed to help Miss Platt and carry her heavy bag. They insisted they would throw her out later.

"Maybe it was my pleading, but at any rate they put her out there.

"I also pleaded with them to return to me a lucky coin some guy brought back from India and gave to me. They did.

"Already Killed Two"

"This black-haired guy was all for killing us both there. He said they already had killed two persons and two more did not make any difference.

"The blond said, however, that we had been all right and he did not think it necessary. That black-haired guy seemed to be sort of hot-headed, to me.

"Well, they tossed us both out and we high-tailed it to the nearest police station."

Corman said that both men had told him they had "been cooped up" for three years and for this reason he was of the opinion they were either escaped or former convicts.

Miss Platt was furnished with a naval officer as an escort upon the arrival of the plane. She was rushed into a limousine.

Her face was pale except for her vividly painted lips which contrasted with the dark fur. A naval officer accompanied her on the trip to the city.

Too Upset to Talk

When reporters asked Miss Platt for her story, the naval officer explained that she was "too upset to talk right now," adding "all the details will come out later. Miss Platt is really too tired and shocked by it all."

Similar Cases Reported

Washington police last night reported they had recevied a report from a taxi driver of Hopewell, Va., that he had been forced, at gun's point, to bring two men to Washington, answering the same general description, last Wednesday. He also was robbed of $4.

Then on Thursday night a District taxi driver, Orrem Jeter, of 530 21st st. nw., reported that he had been hailed by two men still answering the same description, on the approaches of the Pentagon Building, and robbed of $7 in cash and a ring and his watch, after they had entered his cab.

The two men were picked up Thursday night at the Statler Hotel by a driver for the airport. They told him they wished to get a plane, but if they could not, they would like to get him to drive them to Norfolk. He cited a price of $75 for themselves and a third party they said they would include. However, at the airport they failed to find him when they returned from a trip into the waiting room, and perforce took Corman's cab.

One of Their Best Men

Mrs. Rose Corman, mother of the airport chauffeur, said that he was suffering from heart trouble, and that he had formerly been the owner of a print shop here. Fellow drivers at the airport were definite in their assertions that Corman was one of the best men they had there.

Miss Platt had been in Toronto, Canada, and had caught a plane from Buffalo to Washington. She had planned to spend the night here before proceeding to Miami, it was reported.

Naval officials here said she had been employed in the naval attache's office in Havana for six months and had been born in that city, the daughter of American parents.

Bishop-Elect Dun Writes Message to Diocese Here

By Robert Tate Allan

The first message of the Rev. Angus Dun, new Bishop-elect of Washington to the people of the diocese, is published in the current issue of the Washington Diocese.

DR. DUN

Dr. Dun, now dean of the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Cambridge, Mass., wrote:

"You have done me the great honor of electing me your next bishop; and, after much inner struggle, I have been convinced that it is God's will for me to accept that heavy responsibility. Now your decision and mine must be submitted to the other dioceses and to the bishops of our Episcopal Church for their approval. Only when that approval has been given may plans be definitely made for my consecration and installation.

"There have come to me already several cordial invitations to speak in the diocese and to share in decisions regarding plans under consideration. I have declined these regretfully because of my conviction that it would be presumptuous and unwise for me to act in any way as though I were your bishop before I am in fact. Meanwhile, I am sure that you will all carry on devotedly as you have in the time during which you have been without an official leader.

"No one could approach the many-sided responsibilities of the Bishop of Washington without fear and trembling. And it is very humbling to be the object of so many hopes, knowing well that no one man could fulfill all those hopes. I shall not attempt now to say what I think you should expect of your bishop. I shall only say quite simply that the heart of a bishop's position is to be a 'father in God' to the clergy and people of his diocese. I have had the experience of being the father of a little human family and of being something of a father to the intimate 'family' of this school. My prayer is that God will enable me to be a wise and faithful and loving 'father in God' to the much larger household to which I have been called.

"Many of you by your letters and by your kindness to Mrs. Dun and myself when we were in Washington recently have made us very expectant and happy about the years we hope to spend among you. Since we must make ready to separate from dear friends and good companions in God's service here, it is a comfort to know that there are friends and good companions in the same service waiting to welcome us. Your confidence is the best medicine for our fears. And your kindness may even overcome our own sense of inadequacy."

Methodist Crusade Planned

The Washington phase of the "Crusade for a New World Order," sponsored by the Methodist Council of Bishops, is slated for January 27.

HUGHES

The morning and afternoon sessions will take place at Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw., and the night sessions at 8 o'clock at Memorial Continental Hall.

In describing the purpose of the Crusade that is being held throughout the United States and Canada this month, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Washington resident bishop, said yesterday:

"It is an organized effort to register the opinion of the members and constituents of the Methodist Church on the question of the participation of the United States of America in such international cooperation as may be necessary to establish world law and order."

"The Crusade for a New World Order," says Bishop Hughes, "is in no sense a substitute for the Nation-wide plans for the Federal Council of Churches' Commission to Study the Bases of a Just and Durable Peace. Methodists will fully cooperate with the council's splendid plans, but believe it necessary to move from the public meetings to the local parish so that the individual member may be reached, and the individual may express his personal opinion to his representative in Congress."

The Federal Council's "six pillars of peace" are:

1. The peace must provide the political framework for a continuing collaboration of the United Nations and, in due course, of neutral and enemy nations.

2. The peace must make provision for bringing within the scope of international agreement those economic and financial acts of national governments which have widespread international repercussions.

3. The peace must make provision for an organization to adapt the treaty structure of the world to changing underlying conditions.

4. The peace must proclaim the goal of autonomy for subject peoples, and it must establish international organization to assure and to supervise the realization of that end.

5. The peace must establish procedures for controlling military establishments everywhere.

6. The peace must establish in principle, and seek to achieve in practice, the right of individuals everywhere to religious and intellectual liberty.

Mass Meeting to Climax Youth Week Here

The local observance of National Youth Week will be climaxed February 6 with a mass meeting at National City Christian Church, it was announced yesterday by Donald F. Bautz, advisor of the Washington Federation of Christian Youth.

Represented on the membership of the federation are the Christian Endeavor Unions and youth and young adult societies of all major Protestant denominations.

Governmental and business executives interested in American youth have indorsed the special week—January 30 to February 6—which will be sponsored nationally by the International Council of Religious Education and the United Christian Youth Movement.

Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, declared:

"Victory will secure to the youth of the world the greatest opportunity in history—the chance to establish world-wide order based on the principles of personal freedom, social justice and human brotherhood.

"In Youth Week, the young people of the United States and Canada have the opportunity to consecrate themselves anew to the lifelong pursuit of the goals for which countless lives are being sacrificed. In such consecration, youth must be able to count on the understanding and support of adults, in terms of both personal relationships and of education, civic and religious opportunities accessible to all."

Petworth to Reward Choir Attendance

Members of the junior choir of Petworth Baptist Church who have perfect attendance records in 1943 will be given special awards at services tomorrow at 11 a. m. by the Rev. James P. Rodgers, pastor. Another award will be made to the one with the highest number of credits for the year.

"VENI, SANCTE SPIRITUS"
— — — KING ROBERT II — — —

Come, Thou Holy Spirit, come.
And from Thine eternal home
Shed the ray of light divine:
Come, Thou Father of the poor.
Come, Thou Source of all our store,
Come, within our bosoms shine.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Few kings have left a better legacy to the Christian church than King Robert II who gave us this great hymn. We are told that he loved the service of chorister more than his kingly service, and often went to the Church, and in his royal robes with his crown on his head would direct the choir.

Generalship

The publicity experts of the American Federation of Labor have surpassed even themselves. This is no small feat when you consider the ingenuity with which they have met the current crisis. Their skill was apparent in the reply which AFL President William Green made to the unidentified chief of staff who excoriated organized labor for recent strike threats. Mr. Green said that the chief of staff wasn't unidentified and that, anyway, the pistol pointed at his head hadn't been loaded.

But even this stunning rejoinder didn't satisfy the publicity experts. They wanted a real, live whizzbang. So they exhumed a congratulatory message sent to the AFL in 1942 by one of our most identified generals in command of the southwest Pacific war theater and blandly presented it to the press without any reference to its date. Well, well, talk about psychological warfare! Maybe we could lend-lease the AFL public relations department to Dr. Goebbels for the duration.

Our Secret Weapon

It is a reasonable assumption, in view of the War Department's attitude on such matters, that the mysterious jet-propelled fighter plane, whose existence was announced this week, is not only in production but has actually been employed in combat. The plane is radical in design and is said to be capable of flying at great heights and achieving the phenomenal speed of 600 miles an hour. Because of its unique method of propulsion the plane also dispenses with the need of synchronizing the firing of guns with the rotation of the propellers. The plane has no propellers at all. Indeed, Lawrence D. Bell, president of the Bell Aircraft Co., which has built the new war plane, has described it as opening "a new chapter in American aviation history."

At recurrent intervals for a long time the world has been regaled with tall tales from the Third Reich about Hitler's "secret weapon." But the years have passed, the military situation has turned unfavorably against Germany and that "secret weapon" has remained secret, an awesome threat that never materialized. The Allies, on the other hand, have done little talking on that subject, but they have gone ahead and actually built secret weapons, the latest but probably not the last being this jet-propulsion plane which promises to revolutionize air combat. And it is interesting to note that the credit for the development of this new implement of war belongs both to Britain and America. The engine which makes the plane possible was first designed in England 10 years ago. The plane itself was designed in this country and both the RAF and our own Air Force carried out the exhaustive tests that were undertaken before the plane was put in production. A triumph for British and American engineering skill, it is also a triumph for Allied cooperation.

Fire Eater

The most shocking fact about H. R. 3270, the insurance bill, is that it received the approval of the Judiciary Committee of the House. This bill, reduced to its naked intent, would grant to the fire insurance industry of the country an immunity from the antitrust laws—in effect imposing, as we see it, a legislative restriction upon the Supreme Court. And this at a moment when the Court actually has before it an indictment of certain fire insurance companies on the basis of which it will determine whether they are engaged in interstate commerce and therefore subject to the provisions of the Sherman and Clayton Acts. It is proposed, in short, that Congress interfere with the ordinary course of justice in behalf of a particular litigant. Senator O'Mahoney succeeded in blocking a hasty indorsement by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. But a majority of the House group showed no hesitation in putting its imprimatur upon this flagrant invasion of the judicial province.

The insurance bill might, indeed, have moved to easy enactment in the House had it not been for the integrity, energy and acumen of one man—Representative Charles M. LaFollette of Indiana. This Congressman, after the most painstaking research, prepared a careful analysis both of the legal improprieties of H. R. 3270 and of the discriminatory rates imposed by insurance companies under their present freedom from Federal regulation. He exposed the purposes of the insurance lobby. He demonstrated beyond contest the utter irrelevancy of the States' rights plea entered by the bill's sponsors. For his pains he was ignored by the very people who should have been most concerned with what he had to say.

Having inserted his analysis of the insurance bill into the Congressional Record, Mr. LaFollette distributed copies of it to every member of the House Judiciary Committee and gave notice that he would defend his arguments on the floor on December 15. When he rose to speak on that date not a single member of the committee showed either the courtesy or interest to be present. Their absence is an unhappy commentary on the legislative process. For this is a constitutional issue of real significance. And the Constitution can be undermined as well by indifference as by venality. Mr. LaFollette's penetrating study of the insurance issue illuminates the sometimes tedious columns of the Congressional Record. We commend it as edifying reading to all Congressmen who failed to hear him speak.

Court Feud

On the surface there seems to be something quite jolly about the feud that has broken out in the Supreme Court. That august tribunal should now feel quite at home in the Washington atmosphere. For the existence of feuding in its white marble palace brings the court more closely into line with the other coordinate branches of the Government. Congress is always feuding unless it is in recess. And feuds in the Administration have become so numerous that they don't attract much interest any more. So the descent of the Supreme Court into the arena of rough-and-tumble scrapping should at least give Washington officialdom the chummy feeling of being all in the same boat.

We must admit, however, that scoldings administered to Justice Frankfurter by Justices Black and Murphy carry implications that are at the same time disturbing. This legalistic altercation cannot be dismissed as merely the expression of sharply divergent views from the bench. It does suggest that Justices Black and Frankfurter are miles apart in their attitude toward the laws which they expound. But it also suggests something more. Justice Black obviously went out of his way to take a couple of verbal pokes at his brother justice in a single batch of opinions.

In Mercoid vs. Midcontinent Justice Frankfurter, dissenting, took the court to task for embarrassing litigants and the lower courts by "gratuitous innuendoes against a principle of law which, within its proper bounds, is accredited by legal history as well as ethics." The history of this court, he said, "especially admonishes us against the evils of giving opinions not called for." This chiding stirred Justice Black "to add a few remarks in order that silence may not be understood as acquiescence in the views expressed in the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Frankfurter." Of course, there was no possibility of Justice Frankfurter's dissenting views being imputed to Justice Black, for the latter had definitely aligned himself with the majority. He simply went out of his way to mock and discredit a fellow justice. "And for judges to rest their interpretation of the statutes on nothing but their own conceptions of 'morals' and 'ethics' is, to say the least, dangerous business."

In the Federal Power Commission case Justice Murphy joined with Justice Black in shooting a few barbs at what they called "a wholly gratuitous assertion as to constitutional law in the dissent of Mr. Justice Frankfurter." Such "gratuitous" rebuttals to dissenting opinions would appear unfortunate in any event. They are doubly unfortunate when they are as pointed and personalized as were the "added remarks" of Justice Black this week. Vigorous differences of opinion are to be expected. But the orderly processes of justice demand a large measure of restraint on the part of men who sit on the Nation's highest court. The wellsprings of justice have not infrequently been fouled by bitterness and rancor within the confines of the Supreme Court. But every time feuds of this sort break out into backbiting in official opinions the prestige of the court necessarily sags. In other words, the court suffers from what former Chief Justice Hughes called "self-inflicted wounds."

Postwar Jitters

While war production is expected to be somewhat higher this year than it was in 1943, extensive shifts in emphasis will result in the release of men and materials in some areas. Every day, in fact, brings suspension of projects no longer essential to the war effort and cutbacks in production schedules. William L. Batt, vice chairman of WPB, fears that the release of men and materials because of these cutbacks will generate tremendous pressure for an overrapid return to civilian production. Speaking in Chicago, he warned that jobs with a postwar future will attract labor, while peacetime markets and profits will have a special lure for management.

From present indications it will be possible this year to provide a little more liberally for civilians as war production levels off, but before these demands can be safely met, provision will have to be made for the aircraft and other industries that are stepping up their 1944 production schedules. What primarily concerns Mr. Batt is the absence of plans for the orderly handling of such reconversion as is immediately feasible without hindrance to the war effort. His evident alarm is a reminder that the country is still without plans for the reconversion of industry to peacetime pursuits, although the necessity for action is already upon us. The pulling and hauling to get out of war production while the going is good may be deplorable, but it is understandable in view of the uncertain outlook. The anxiety engendered in the minds of industrial managements and labor alike would be allayed if the Government would cease talking about conversion problems and proceed to do something constructive.

Leon Henderson, former OPA head, who has gained at first hand wide knowledge of the effect of war on American industry, notes in an article in the February American that when Germany is defeated we shall begin at once to cancel billions of dollars of contracts. During the "twilight of war" against Japan, he estimates that production of war materials may decline from 8 billion to 4 billion dollars per month, with an accompanying reduction of possibly 8 million persons directly or indirectly engaged in war work. How are we going to find employment for the released millions of workers? What are we going to do with the immense amount of surplus materials and the Government-owned war plants that will be released even before the war in the Pacific has ended? Certainly we are going to face chaos unless we decide very soon what we intend to do.

There should be plans for quick settlement of claims of contractors against the Government so as to release working capital for new uses. Yet such plans remain in the discussion stage, with a powerful amount of pulling and hauling among rival Government officials and agencies delaying final action. What are we going to do about the vast stores of clothing, equipment and other supplies that the armed forces will be ready to release when the war in Europe is over? We don't yet know, and a manufacturer will be taking tremendous risks in producing such articles in the postwar period unless he knows when, where, in what amounts, and how Government surpluses are to be utilized. We pay lip service to the demand that every worker be assured a job after the war. But, as Mr. Henderson says, we have no clear-cut national policy in respect to employment. It is not surprising, therefore, that some civilian groups should be getting ready to seek cover against storms to come when they should be out front helping to fight the enemy. The only way to reassure them is for the Government to push to a conclusion the plans for postwar reconversion that have been hanging fire for so long.

Food Stamps

The War Food Administration has indorsed a plan for reviving food stamps as a means of giving low-income families food at cheaper prices. Its indorsement is, however, accompanied by a proviso that adoption of such a plan should not be regarded as in any way a substitute for the Administration's price stabilization program. The Aikin bill providing for introduction of the stamp program specifically forbids payment of food subsidies by Government agencies and is being urged as an alternative to subsidies designed to hold retail prices in check. Hence this qualified WFA indorsement will be cold comfort to its sponsors.

The former food-stamp plan was introduced as a means of disposing of food surpluses at a time when many families, victims of economic depression, were unable to purchase sufficient food to keep them in health. It is now proposed to revive this stamp program in the midst of war when food shortages necessitate strict conservation and rationing of many types of food products. It is being urged, too, at a time when employment is at a record peak and workers' earnings at extraordinarily high levels. There is no possible excuse, under present conditions, for paying out food subsidies that might cost the Government three billion dollars annually. Moreover, since such payments are being urged as an alternative to rollback subsidies, higher-income groups, affected by rising living costs, would demand wage increases as vociferously as before. All that would happen would be that a good many millions of workers now earning sufficient money to support themselves and their families would receive extra money to spend on food—thereby adding to the pressure to lift food prices.

There might be some excuse for issuance of food stamps to low-income groups if the Government were to decide to impose comprehensive retail sales taxes on food and other necessities. One of the chief arguments brought against the sales tax has been that it would impose undue hardships upon family groups that are barely able to maintain decent living standards. A modified stamp plan, strictly limited to hardship cases, would remove one of the strongest objections raised to a general sales tax. But we fail to see why, in the absence of any general sales tax, billions should be poured out to supplement the incomes of some 18 million families and individuals (WFA estimates) who are currently spending less for food than the generous allotment contemplated by the Aikin bill.

"ALL THE PULSES OF THE WORLD . . . BEAT FOR US"

The humble men, we drive each unskilled hand
To lay amid the bowels of the night
A rocky base which through all time shall stand
On which to rear the people's House of Light.
Here children shall be formed in simple truth
That man must seek with man the common goal,
Till strength means clemency, and courage ruth,
Our creed that goodness moves the human soul.
Behold the palace flung to morning air.
The prophets sang; our glory, that as tears
Flood down our cheeks, with hands bleeding and bare,
As cannon rake us from the wasted years,
While myriad wings eclipse the starry sky,
We build the House and raise our joyful cry.

Good Neighbors

By Virginia Prewett

Argentina Moves

AS NINETEEN new world republics have this week moved swiftly to protect the hemisphere from a wave of subversive upsets, Argentina's military dictatorship, in two decisive steps, has fully dropped its mask. And once again, the challenge has been met by a strong and pointed indication that this country is prepared to see the present inter-American crisis through to the end.

When the inter-American committee for political defense advised the New World Republics to get together and find out who and what was behind any new revolutionary government before recognizing it, it meant fish or cut bait for Argentina. Suspicion that the Bolivian coup had in part at least been engineered from Argentina has been strong from the first. It would follow automatically that the New Bolivian junta would play Argentina's game in trying to break up New World unity and that upsets on the same pattern would be inspired elsewhere.

Ramirez Government

Argentina's Ramirez government on Monday showed where it stands by recognizing the Bolivian junta. On Wednesday they further showed their hand by clamping down a censorship that deprives Argentines of the right of free speech as completely as Nazi conquerors have silenced the captive peoples of Europe. This clampdown covers newspapers, magazines, films, the radio, news services and foreign correspondents.

In recognizing the Bolivian junta, the Ramirez regime has set itself definitely outside the group of republics who are holding the defense arc. To realize just what the censorship means, it must be remembered that Argentina has two of the most powerful newspapers in the world—La Prensa and La Nacion, both pro-democratic. They have been considered too big for any government to touch and have managed to get around previous controls. But the gauntlet is down to them now. They will have to become Ramirez's mouthpieces—or fight back.

But this is not all there is to it. At his press conference Thursday, a reporter asked Secretary of State Hull about the new restrictions on the Argentine press and received the reply that his interest in the matter was welcomed. The Secretary further stated that facts were being studied and that if there was anything he could do to show a sympathetic interest in the press or in the broader situation, it would be done.

At the same conference it was given out that all the 19 loyal American republics have accepted the recommendation to consult before recognizing any revolutionary regime and that the committee on political defense has advised them to consult through regular diplomatic channels. The United States has agreed heartily to this. This would mean that no time limit will be set on consultations, in the first place. In the second, all information exchanged will remain confidential.

Press Conference

A third important point was brought out at this press conference when a reporter asked if the possibility that Argentina might be mixed up in the Bolivian coup would come within the studies arising from the recommendations made by the committee for political defense. Secretary Hull made it clear what the whole point of the consultations was to find out whether any unfriendly influence whatsoever had been at work there. It was naturally asked what effect it would have on relations with Argentina if they had provoked the upset, but the Secretary postponed answering pending further development of the facts.

In all these events there is tracing one of the most transcendental crises that the New World has faced in its modern history. First and foremost, there is the immediate threat of distracting, discouraging and weakening upsets throughout the hemisphere to be met and warded off. This is just as much a part of fighting the Second World War as is any drive for military objectives on actual battlefields. But the issues at stake are really much larger than this.

The war leadership of the United Nations are today laying the groundwork for a world organization intended to secure a peace rather than a mere armistice when the hostilities of the Second World War end. One of the prime requirements of this Nation in making that peace is unity and stability in this hemisphere. We must have it so that our course can be surer as we sail the new and uncharted seas of world cooperation. A hemisphere system in which all the New World republics except Argentina are cooperating has been built up and it is the expressed intention of these nations to go into the peace with the New World arc intact.

Argentina alone has consistently sat on the fence. We are used to seeing her sit there, but it seems lately that she has fallen over on the other side. The time has come to find out what this will lead to—and what can be done about it. This question had to come up sooner or later. It is just as well to get it cleared up now.

Poland's Borders

By Barnet Nover

The Basic Issues Examined

THREE ISSUES are dominant in the increasingly bitter dispute regarding the Polish-Russian boundary.

The first has to do with the history and ethnography of the eastern border region which became part of the Republic of Poland following the resurrection of that nation in 1918.

The second has to do with the validity of the plebiscite carried out by the Russian occupation authorities in the Polish area annexed by the Soviet Union in the autumn of 1939, following the fourth (the German-Russian) partition of Poland.

And, third and most basic of all, is the question whether a great power has the right to set aside unilaterally a territorial arrangement it had accepted and solemnly pledged to respect.

THE HISTORIC background of Eastern Poland is exceedingly complicated. Depending on what date is chosen as the point of departure a good case can be made out on the basis of part ownership for the inclusion of the region in Russia. But at least as good a case can be made out for its continued retention by Poland.

It is true that part of the region, namely Eastern Galicia, was never Russian, but during the century and a quarter of Poland's eclipse was under Hapsburg rule. It is also true that the territory west of what is known as White Russia had been under Russian rule. In fact a large part of Poland was ruled by the Czars.

Nor can the rightness or wrongness of the respective claims to the disputed area be judged solely on the basis of ethnographic factors. A large number of Ukrainians and a much smaller but still considerable number of White Russians inhabit the region. But the decision regarding their future nationality cannot be made ex parte on the basis of a population's race, language and cultural affiliations.

On that basis Germany would have a claim to two-thirds of Switzerland, and France to a good part of Belgium. Given the divergent Russian-Polish claims justice demands that the people themselves be given a free and uninhibited opportunity to choose their allegiance.

THE RUSSIANS, for their part, insist that precisely this was done in all the regions occupied by Russia following the deal with the Third Reich.

Thus a writer in Pravda, the same writer who took Wendell Willkie so violently to task as a "political gambler" who is "muddying the waters" because of an article he wrote recently for the New York Times, speaks of the "democratic plebiscite" that was held in the annexed regions.

But if the Soviet government is convinced that the peoples of the Baltic states and of eastern Poland are as unanimously in favor of their inclusion in Russia as those 1939 plebiscites would indicate it should not object to a repolling of those inhabitants.

MORE IMPORTANT is the question of treaty observance.

Soviet spokesmen are very careful not to base any claim to the disputed region on the treaties with Russia signed with Germany in 1939. Yet it was, in the first instance, on the basis of those treaties that Russia moved into and annexed eastern Poland, an annexation which the Polish government has never recognized and which neither Great Britain nor the United States ever recognized.

Indeed, eight days after the German invasion of Russia, the Soviet government signed a treaty with the Polish government in which it was stated that:

"The Government of the Soviet Socialist Republics recognizes the Soviet-German treaties of 1939 as to territorial changes in Poland as having lost their validity."

Now if this declaration has any meaning at all it means that on July 30, 1941 (the date of the signing of the Soviet-Polish pact), Russia gave its approval to the restoration of the status quo regarding the Polish-Russian border. Unless, therefore, an agreement to that end is reached by Russia and Poland the reannexation of eastern Poland by Russia would be in flat contradiction of that and earlier pledges by the Soviet government.

BOTH POLAND and Russia are our allies. Both have deserved well of the world, Poland for having been the first to resist Hitler by force of arms, Russia for the magnificent fight she has made against the German invaders.

Should Russia, regardless of its past pledges, unilaterally go ahead with her plans to annex eastern Poland and any other areas she deems essential to her security, nobody can stop her from doing so. Certainly neither Great Britain nor the United States could do so. But such unilateral action by Russia would tend to undermine the foundation of that public law which the Allies are now trying to rebuild, and make a mockery of the Moscow and Teheran declarations which were hailed with such unrestrained enthusiasm by the entire civilized world.

Propaganda Comic Strips

On Sunday, December 26, The Post carried a comic strip entitled "Little Joe" that stands as one of the most unworthy thrusts that I have ever seen against a group of racially different people in this country. In it a good-hearted American housewife is pictured sending Christmas presents to some nearby "Jap internees." In return she receives from them a large present that explodes on being opened. Moral: these "Jap internees are "awful, inhuman beasts," and "Japs jest don't understand kindness."

If the Postoffice Department is canceling mailing rights to Esquire for not holding to its original intention, similar rights might well be denied to the syndicate that circulates this cruel Nazi-like race propaganda under the label of "comics."

As an American just back from 10 months' interment under the Japanese army in the Far East, I object to this type of wholesale race smearing. In our interment camp we had a number of petty official and personal obstructions, but there was always one thing that helped us to keep our heads high as Americans. It was that we believed we were better men because our country stands for a tradition of democracy and fair play, a land in which men and women, risen from the oppression and prejudice of older lands, have toiled and sweated together to create a mighty, throbbing nation. The roll of any Army or Navy group, any factory, any school, bears family names from a score of different countries and races—Clark, Cohen, Duffy, Inouye, Wong, Orapello, Hermann, Harterian, Mischeniko. As an American I rejoice at the mixtures—and grieve at the separations.

Another deplorable part of this Christmas-inspired comic strip is that the vast majority of child readers will make no distinction among "Jap internees," as Japanese subjects, Japanese long since naturalized as American citizens, and second or third generation Americans of Japanese parentage. Although the FBI has designated the dangerous people in the camps and has dealt with them accordingly, the average youngster reading this story will condemn all of the internees, and also quite naturally, those who are not living in camps. There is nothing in the comic strip story to suggest differences in guilt, or that many are actually guilty of nothing. For taking advantage of the child's inability to discriminate between guilty and innocent, between bad-intentioned and well-intentioned internees, the motive behind this little story is the deliberate stirring up of hadred against an entire people, many of whom are decent, God-fearing citizens of the United States. When things like this are fed to American children it is time for us to turn some of our attention from the re-education of the children of Europe to that of our own. And to pinch off the evil at its root.

Finally, the existence of race hatred in the United States is one of the most potent political weapons that Tokyo possesses in trying to mobilize both the Japanese and other people of East Asia. Folks in this country would be very much surprised to know how many of our American sins appear today in the Japanese-controlled newspapers in East Asia. When we see how hard our country is working to turn out the materials of war, it is indeed amazing to watch Tojo's political ammunition being manufactured and handed over to him for nothing. Therefore, it is about time that we in this country recognized that our enemy has been openly on the loose all over the world since September 18, 1931—not just since December 7, 1941—and that there are Japanese in East Asia who think so too.

Break With Argentina

Congratulations on your courageous and timely editorial in today's issue, "Ramirez Regime," urging that our Government, in concert with the other members of the United Nations, break relations with the government in the Argentine. This situation has been as clear as day to some of us who have been in close touch with developments in the Argentine. As early as 1937 a friend of mine, a man who had escaped from a Nazi concentration camp and went to Buenos Aires, exposed the penetration of Nazism and Fascism into the military and government circles of that country. He warned our Ambassador that the situation was becoming serious, that the Nazis were undermining the prestige and influence of America not only in the Argentine but in Latin America.

Crowded Streetcars

Yes, I know there's a war on, but the dispatching of Bureau of Engraving streetcars in the morning hours is still grossly inefficient. Crowded cars pass me up at R st. every morning, with not another car in sight. It takes me on the average a full half hour from my street to the Commerce Building, if I include waiting time.

While this goes on dozens of empty or practically empty cars streak by going the other way. Good engineering practice would be to switch-back some of these northbound cars, say at U st., and give some of us close-inners a break. Why should all the empties go clear to the end of the line for another load?

Kultur Vs. Culture

Strasbourg University

ONLY TODAY have details become available of a German outrage which occurred in France last November 25, but of which the news had so far been successfully stifled.

This was the forcible arrest of 500 students of Strasbourg University and the killing of one of the professors.

The Alsatian University had moved to Clermont-Ferrand (Laval's home town) in 1939, when the French ordered the evacuation of Strasbourg, and its services were merged with those of the local university. In 1940, when the Germans added Alsace-Lorraine to the Reich, the opportunity was afforded to the Alsatian students and professors, whom the Nazis considered as Germans, to return to Alsace; but both faculty and students, who disagreed with the German theory on their nationality, preferred, in overwhelming majority, to stay in France.

Strasbourg University continued, therefore, to function in Clermont-Ferrand. It was a sore point with the Germans, who asked several times that the university be closed. Its existence, they argued, was a provocation, since it implied that France had not accepted the "return" of Alsace-Lorraine to Germany.

Otto Abetz, Germany's ambassador to France, discussed this point with Pierre Laval on a number of occasions, but was obliged to admit the reasonableness of Laval's argument against closing the university. Laval pointed out that the moral satisfaction to Germans would be small, most of them being ignorant of the very fact that the school was still functioning. But, on the contrary, the people of France were extremely sensitive about the question of Alsace-Lorraine, and if the university were closed, the effect on them would be deplorable, and would increase the difficulties of the Vichy government in attempting to make France follow the policy of collaboration.

Germans Planted Spies

After the Germans occupied all of France, several small incidents caused the students to wonder if the Germans had not planted spies among them, and this belief became a topic for jokes. They took it lightly, often speculating laughingly on the identity of the supposed spies, and thought it quite unnecessary to refrain from expressing their anti-German sentiments.

On November 25, they discovered that the spying in the university was no joke.

Until 10:30 in the morning, November 25 was a normal day in the university building on the Avenue Carnot. It was at that hour that one of the professors, glancing out of a window, saw German soldiers armed with submachine guns taking up positions around the building. Nothing was said until the 11 o'clock bell announcing the end of classes sounded, when the students were warned that the university had been surrounded.

They hurried down the stairs to see what was going on. German soldiers, advancing from all sides, ordered them into a courtyard. Soon there were 500 young men and girls shivering in the court, for though it was a cold day, they had not been allowed to get their coats. They were obliged to keep their hands up during the whole episode. Occasionally a shot was heard, but nothing is known about the reasons for the firing or its results—except in one case.

Murder of Professor Collomb

That was the killing of Professor Collomb, whose subject was Greek history. Leaving the rector's office, he was ordered to raise his hands by a Gestapo agent. No doubt bewildered by the unexpectedness of the order, he failed to comply quickly enough to please the Gestapo man, who fired his revolver point-blank into the professor's chest, killing him.

The other members of the faculty, arrested in the university building like the students, were likewise brought into the courtyard at 12, where the students had already been standing, coatless and with hands raised above their heads, for an hour. The professors too had their hands up, and Gestapo men armed with revolvers walked behind them.

And then the identity of the spy became apparent. Georges Mathieu, a history major, who had never been suspected by anyone of being a stoolpigeon, proceeded to direct the operations of sorting the sheep from the goats. He was assisted by a young German girl, comfortably muffled in a fur coat, who was known to the students as having attended some public lectures, though she had not matriculated at the university. At the directions of this pair, students and faculty were ordered, one by one, to stand either to the right or to the left. This process continued until 7 in the evening, when they were taken into the refectory, and after further examinations, classified into those who would be released, and those who would be kept in jail.

Professor Collomb's funeral took place on November 29. It was attended by a tremendous crowd—but no representative of the Vichy government was present. However, Vichy is credited with the fact that the university was reopened. But the motive which caused Laval to protest to Abetz was not patriotism. He pointed out that much resentment had been created in France, and that his task was being made more difficult.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

False Universalism

IN HIS latest article Mr. Sumner Welles says that "essential as this is," the close cooperation of the four great powers is not enough, and "there is also needed . . . permanent international institutions" of all the peoples. Under the Moscow Agreement the four powers have promised to meet that need at "the earliest practicable date," and by the Connally resolution the Senate has underwritten this promise on behalf of the United States.

LIPPMANN

The real question is not whether, but how to proceed from the four-power war alliance to the larger organization which will eventually include all "peace-loving states." This is a difficult question, and we must think carefully before we try to answer it.

THE CRUX of the problem is how to associate the smaller powers with the great powers. There are two schools of thought on how to do this. The one would repeat the Wilsonian pattern by establishing now, or at least immediately after the European armistice, a world council founded on a covenant among all the United Nations, and open to the friendly neutrals and eventually to our present enemies. The other school holds that there are intermediate steps which must be taken before such a universal organization can safely and effectively be brought into being. The intermediate steps which they regard as indispensable are the successful organization of the neighborhoods around the great powers.

Those of us who hold this view are charged with playing "power politics" and of ignoring the rights of the smaller nations. This charge is, I believe, unfounded and uninformed. The best witnesses are the smaller nations themselves.

ONE OF the principal smaller nations is the Netherlands. On December 28 the Netherlands Foreign Minister, Dr. Van Kleffens, addressed by radio his own people in occupied Europe. Did he, as some well-intentioned American commentators are suggesting, express the fear that his small country would be dictated to by the great powers? Not at all. Dr. Van Kleffens expressed the exactly opposite fear, namely that Great Britain and the United States might again become disarmed and, therefore, too weak to protect the Netherlands against the revival of German military power: "When, therefore, General Smuts advises us to collaborate with England after the war, my answer is—we can only consider this provided that the British Empire, and Great Britain particularly, show, like ourselves, that they have no intentions of once more going the way towards large scale disarmament."

The Netherlands is not the only country which takes the view that it will collaborate with Britain, and also with us, if we are strong but not if we again become weak. This is also the Belgian view. Dr. Van Kleffens says it "is not a matter of doubt." This is, we may be quite sure, also the Norwegian view, and it will unquestionably be the French view as soon as we manage to find our way to a more statesmanlike recognition of France and her place in Europe and in the world.

THE NOTION is false that the smaller nations are opposed to the intermediate phase of organizing their neighborhoods for security. The Netherlands Foreign Minister wishes to see "a strong formation in the west with America, Canada, and other British dominions as an arsenal and a vast reservoir of power, with England as a base, especially for air power, and the west European mainland—by which I mean the Netherlands, Belgium and France—as a bridgehead. A development of this kind would indeed compel us to rely on the western powers, but conversely they would also need us. It is difficult to imagine a stronger position for our country."

He then goes on to say, though he does not elaborate upon it, that "this formidable western bloc would find its eastern counterpart in Russia which, like ourselves, will have to devote full continued attention—and it will wish to do so—to the security of its open frontier on the German side."

THE ORGANIZATION of the east European neighborhood is more difficult than the western. There are no disputed frontiers among the western allies. It is absolutely essential that the disputed eastern frontiers should be settled, and in the utmost possible degree, settled by consent. But of one thing we may be certain. They cannot be settled by a universal organization of all the nations of the world. They can be settled only by direct, and specific negotiations among the nations immediately concerned, with the help of such good offices as their mutual friends may be able to give.

THE WORD "institutions" is frequently used in this country but it is often misunderstood. We are likely to think that a charter, a covenant, the blueprint of an organization or a large gathering of delegates, is an institution. But I believe that history will support the view that enduring institutions register, formalize, and regulate organization which has already been formed. The American Constitution did not create the United States, the States which were already united, adopted a constitution which made "a more perfect union."

The Wilson pattern of the League of Nations called for a union which in fact had not yet become organized, and actually, though the French and others protested, the writing of the covenant was regarded as the occasion for dissolving rather than perfecting the real organization of security, tested in battle, which had been formed during the war.

WE MUST not repeat this cardinal error or we shall suffer the same disastrous consequences. We are repeating the error when we talk as if we thought that a universal society was a substitute for, an alternative to, the concert of the great powers, and such specific neighborhood and regional organization as the Netherlands Foreign Minister envisages for western Europe and the President of Czechoslovakia for central and eastern Europe.

The universal society would be like a body which was all flesh and had no bones, would be like a roof without a structure to sustain it, if we let ourselves be diverted by a false universalism from the practical, and therefore the specific, organization of security.

Families of Personnel Killed In War Get Swift Financial Aid

By John A. Singerhoff

Deaths of three Army fliers in a flaming plane crash at Anacostia, Wednesday, brought to light elaborate Government machinery which daily provides financial aid to dependents of military personnel killed in this war.

Through the vast Veterans' Administration and Army, Navy, Marine and Coast Guard finance offices, payments amount to $50 a month for widows or husbands; $15 for the first child and $13 for each other child; as much as $55 monthly annuity payments from National Service Life Insurance; payments reaching $50 to dependent parents, and a gratuity in the amount of one-half year's salary of the deceased officer or enlisted person.

Killed in the crash were Lieut. Col. R. W. Hale, 29, pilot, of 2980 2d st. se., who left a wife and three children, and Capts. Walter R. Johnson, Chicago, and Robert L. Garrard, Gibsonia, Ill.

Scale of Assistance

In the case of Mrs. Hale monetary assistance will include:

A total of $91 from the Veterans' Administration pension fund, broken up into a $50 payment to her, $15 for the first child and $13 for each of the other two. If Colonel Hale had the national insurance, she will receive $5.51 per thousand dollars worth of insurance up to $10,000 for 240 months.

In addition, the Army makes an immediate payment to her of an amount equal to one-half of his yearly salary and defrays the entire expense of his burial.

The latter payment is a "gift" to the widow or children or dependents, it was said, and is not subject to any claim. Also the amount is not available as an asset to be distributed under a will.

It was pointed out, however, that the death of the service person must occur while he or she is on active duty and not be due to any misconduct. The sum is payable even though death did not occur in line of duty.

Pension allowances to Mrs. Hale will continue until her death or remarriage. The payments to the children will continue until they are 18 or if they are attending college or university until they are 21.

In the event, Colonel Hale had a parent dependent upon him, he or she would receive $45 a month. If he had both parents dependent they would receive $25 a month each. These amounts would not affect Mrs. Hale's pension.

Beneficiaries under the national life insurance—limited to annuity payments—are restricted to wife, child, parents, brother or sister.

More than 100 billion dollars of this service insurance is in force today, only 30 billion less than the total private insurance.

Veterans' Administration facilities here and in 100 field stations throughout the country quickly process dependency claims for both for payments is governed wholly by the period necessary to collect necessary proofs of death, marriage and birth. Instances are on record of a claim being approved in a single day.

Officials pointed out that for dependents to benefit from pension funds the death must have occurred in line of duty. When the Veterans' Administration receives proof of death, it immediately mails forms to the dependent to be filled out and returned.

This process, it was said, is often delayed by the dependent moving without notifying the service branch involved or the Veterans' Bureau of the new address.

Oftentimes, dependents fail to provide adequate proof of marriage or births which at all times must be official documents and not copies certified by notary publics or other civil officers.

One official suggested that dependents would facilitate payments if they now accumulated the necessary records and documents holding them in the event they are needed.

Improper names and addresses frequently hold up applications for pensions and insurance. More than 18 million names are indexed at the Administration Building here, it was said.

All persons communicating with the bureau are requested to include the serial numbers of soldier, sailor or marine.

Though payments of pensions and insurance annuities sometimes are delayed, the payment of the gratuity is almost immediate upon receipt of the proof of death.

Service organizations likewise defray funeral expenses of all military personnel killed.

War's Human Factor

Our most valuable secret weapon is "the self-reliant, resourceful American soldier" and nowhere are his talents more valuable than in the air, says Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Army Air Force commander.

Arnold closes a report to the Secretary of War with this tribute to his men:

"Nowhere in the world are the lives of men as interdependent as in a bomber on a mission. The pilot must be quick, daring, cautious. The gunners must drew a bead on shadows flashing past them at 600 miles an hour. The navigator has the plane in the palm of his hand from start to finish; every minute he strays off his course makes it 60 seconds less likely that he and his comrades will return.

If the bombardier misses, the sortie has been pointless. He takes over at the moment of greatest danger, when the airplane must be in level flight and not engaging in evasive action. During the bomb run, the plane must be traveling a straight course, with speed and altitude constant. No dead engine, or groaning companion with a leg shot off, must interfere with the operation of an intricate bombsight.

Nerve Strain Cited

"The nervous strain imposed on them is much greater than any physical effort. After a certain period of operational flying, the average crew member's efficiency curve will start going downhill. Then he must be replaced, not only for his own welfare but for the safety of his companions and his airplane.

"Charts, graphs and strategy would mean nothing without the devotion ardor and bitter pride of our men. The reading public has been surfeited with fabulous accounts of how they live and what they do; how, after having had three engines and a wing shot off, they come in on the other wing, one engine and a prayer. Unfortunately, it always takes two wings and usually two engines to return.

"The crews are made up of men, and it is as men—not as heroes—that they have to fight this war. It is a dirty war, as dirty as any. Heroes or not, our men have done heroic things. Privates, sergeants, generals have put their lives on the line, not without regard to consequences—as some like to think—but knowing full well what the odds were.

Instructors Play Big Part

"On the training fields of the United States other men are making another kind of sacrifice. Top fliers themselves, they have been wanting more than anything else to get into combat. Cadets whom they have taught to fly return home loaded with honors and higher than they in rank, perhaps. But every German or Japanese plane brought down is a tribute to the quality of their work. They are the instructors.

"There are weather observers in lonely Aleutian outposts, communications men in a globe-encircling network. Army engineers who built fighter strips where no human being had ever penetrated, Navy crews who brought in supplies under skies filled with Zeros—all men who kept the Army Air Forces in the air as surely as any pilot.

"Behind them and behind every man in uniform are the men and women who work in our aircraft factories, the farmers who raise their food, the miners who bring up the ore, the women who make parachutes, the 600,000 volunteers who acted as plane spotters until they could be released for other defense work.

Final Tribute to Airmen

"But final tribute must be to the airmen who pit their flesh, skill and steel against the flesh, skill and steel of our enemies. It is they who are fighting this air war."

The human factor in the air forces is not composed entirely of men, however. Arnold says 20,000 members of the Women's Army Corps are filling 200 different jobs in the air forces and 100,000 additional WAC's are needed. Furthermore, approximately 1000 women are serving as Women's Air Force Service Pilots. These WASPS ferry aircraft in the United States. They fly everything, including Thunderbolt fighters and Flying Fortresses. They tow targets at gunnery schools, act as copilots on night searchlight missions and take meteorologists aloft.

Arnold reports on the excellent safety record of the Army Air Forces, saying: "Ninety-five out of each 100 Army Air Force pilots in training can be expected to fly through the next 12 months without a scratch."

He describes the work of the Air Surgeon's Office, giving much of the credit for the great progress of the air medical program to "the excellent care given the injured, sick and wounded men by our nearly 7000 nurses, including the flight nurses."

"Since Pearl Harbor, over 125,000 sick, wounded and injured have been flown from combat zones in American transport planes. . . . In the Mediterranean theater (in less than a year) more than 25,000 men with all types of diseases and wounds were transported eight million miles by air. And only only patient died—one in 25,000.

New Reservoir Contract Let

District Commissioners yesterday awarded a contract to Baltimore Contractors, Inc. of Baltimore, for construction of a 10-million-gallon reservoir in Fort Stanton Park within six months. This will make the new supply available before hot weather begins.

The firm's bid will cost the District $164,375 and other costs will bring the total cost to $207,450. The new reservoir will augment the present one which holds three million gallons. It will be shaped like a stadium and is to be constructed with sloping sides to eliminate use of vertical walls requiring steel reinforcement. After the war, a roofing is expected to be built.

The new reservoir is expected to be adequate to supply population of Anacostia and neighboring areas for at least 25 years of normal growth.

When the new reservoir is operating, the old one will be emptied and cleaned and treated against ground seepage.

Boys' Vow Sent To Eisenhower

A Victory Honor Roll, bearing pledges of more than 14,000 boys and girls to fight waste will be forwarded to General Eisenhower, Maj. Gen. James A. Ulio, Adjutant General, declared in a presentation ceremony Thursday.

The scroll, inscribed, "In recognition of the superb achievements of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and the courageous armies under his command," was presented by three Boy Scouts chosen from Washington troops participating in the Boy Scout paper salvage campaign sponsored by The Washington Post.

Conrad Grant, 12, Troop 29; Allen Kramer, 15, Troop 64 and William Glew, 16, Troop 83, represented the children throughout the country who had signed the pledge, and Scout Grant made the presentation.

Salvaged paper collection figures announced yesterday by the Washington troops include 3000 pounds collected by Troop 249 of Silver Spring, Md., and 500 pounds gathered by Troop 241 of Chevy Chase, which already has about four tons of paper salvage to its credit since it joined the drive.

Senate Unit to Probe Charge Fly Tried to Restrain Witnesses

Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission will be questioned by the House FCC Investigating Committee on an alleged attempt to restrain some House committee witnesses by use of a White House communication, Representative Clarence F. Lea (Democrat) of California, said last night.

Lea said FCC Commissioner T. A. M. Craven testified before the committee that prior to his appearance before the House group Fly showed him a copy of a letter from the President expressing disapproval of the testimony of Rear Admiral Joseph Redman, chief of Navy Communications.

Redman had criticized the FCC's intelligence division and its foreign broadcast monitoring services, and the White House had requested a copy of his testimony for examination last summer, Lea said. He said Craven testified that the letter shown him by Fly indicated the White House regarded Redman's remarks as "disloyal." Representative Lea denied any knowledge of published reports that the President had recommended Redman's replacement.

The House committee chairman said Fly, when he is called before the committee in the near future, will be questioned on the letter and his use of it, and asked to produce a copy if it is still in existence.

Lea said the committee will look into reports that Rear Admiral Stanford C. Hooper, another communications officer, was transferred from his post in 1942 following a policy clash with Fly.

Newark, N.J., News Suspends, Blames Labor Difficulties

Newark, N. J., Jan. 7 (AP).—The Newark Evening News, saying labor trouble compelled the step, suspended publication today for the first time in its 60 years of growth to a position as one of the Nation's leading newspapers.

The management asserted a printers' "slow-down strike" had forced suspension; the printers' union denied striking and said the men had been locked out.

At issue between the News and Newark Typographical Union No. 103 is the question of a wage rise under a contract over which the War Labor Board claims jurisdiction. The International Typographical Union affiliate seeks a $5.70 rise over the present scale of $59.85 a week for day work on three Newark newspapers.

U. S. Survey Reveals That Nearly 17 Million Have Had Flu or Grippe So Far This Winter

By GEORGE GALLUP,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 7.—An estimated total of 16,800,000 persons throughout the country have been afflicted in the current flu epidemic since it began—an epidemic which gives every indication of being far more widespread than the epidemic of 1940.

The incidence of flu was measured in a survey by the Institute which covered a true cross-section of every State in the Union and of every age group and income level in each State. The persons interviewed in the survey were asked how many people in their homes have had flu or grippe so far this winter.

With the epidemic still far from over, the total incidence to date follows:

PRESENT EPIDEMIC TO DATE

Percent who have had flu or grippe	13%
Estimated number of persons affected	16,800,000

A similar Institute survey in 1941 covering the flu epidemic of the winter of 1940-41 found that in the whole of that siege the number of adults with flu was 25 per cent.

This winter has also shown an abnormally high incidence of the common cold.

In previous Institute surveys the peak number of persons found suffering from colds was 23 million in February, 1942. A survey just completed shows that during the period December 17-30, 1943, the number afflicted with colds reached a new high of 32 million persons, or 25 per cent of the total population.

As in previous years, the highest incidence of colds was found in young children under 10 years of age. That has been the case in each of seven national surveys on colds conducted by the Institute since December, 1941. At present the lowest incidence is found in the age groups 20-29 and 50 and over.

The survey also reveals that, in addition to the 13 per cent who have had flu this winter, a total of 53 per cent of the population have had one or more colds since September 1.

This makes a grand total of 66 per cent—two-thirds of the population—who have had either flu or a cold during the winter to date.

Such illnesses have a direct effect upon the Nation's war production, for it has been shown that colds are the largest single source of lost manhours in war factories.

Flu Deaths Increase

Deaths attributed largely to the influenza epidemic increased for the fifth consecutive week in the 7-day period ended January 1, with the Nation's death rate leaping to 50.4 per cent above the 3-year average for the week.

This was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau on information from 89 major cities. The mortality rate for the week was 13.2 per cent above that for the preceding week.

Capital Sales Gain 7%, Set Record in '43

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in 1943 were 7 per cent heavier than in 1942 and set a new all-time high, according to figures released yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

In the four weeks ended January 1, retail sales here were unchanged as compared with the comparable 1942 period. Sales in December failed to show the usual seasonal upturn, following November's sharp rise brought about by early Christmas shopping.

In the last week of the year local sales likewise were unchanged from the last week in 1942, the Richmond Reserve Bank reported. Sales last week in the entire Fifth Federal Reserve District were down 4 per cent.

Meauwhile the Federal Reserve Board reported that, nationally, 1943 department stores sales had soared 11 per cent above 1942 and 55 per cent above 1939. This indicated that last year's national volume set a new all-time high inasmuch as the 1942 sales were of record proportions.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Resources at New High

All officers and directors were reelected by shareholders at the annual meeting of the American Building Association. The report of the secretary, Wilfred H. Blanz, disclosed that resources are now in excess of 17 million dollars for the first time in the institution's history.

Spice Supplies Heavier

Spice supplies now are more adequate than at any time since shortly after Pearl Harbor, the American Spice Trade Association disclosed yesterday.

"The first year after the Japanese attack," said the organization, "certain spices almost disappeared from the market. In the second year supplies increased but still were low and now, in the third year, there are ample stocks of everything except cinnamon."

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., one of the Nation's largest distributors, said that currently "the housewife can continue 'seasoning to taste' despite the nearly fatal blows to the spice trade in the early stages of the war in Africa and the Pacific."

B. & O. Personnel Changes

Changes in the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's passenger department were announced yesterday by the new general passenger traffic manager, Howard E. Simpson, who took the post recently after the retirement of W. B. Calloway.

The changes, effective January 1, included:

E. H. Riecks, assistant general passenger agent, Washington, appointed assistant general passenger agent at Baltimore.

L. O. Drumwright, division passenger agent, Washington, appointed assistant general passenger agent, Washington.

J. A. Lewis, city passenger agent, Washington, appointed division passenger agent at Washington.

Spalding Net Doubles

A. G. Spalding, Inc., reported net profit for the year ended October 31 of $502,842, equal to $1 a common share, compared with $262,644 or 48 cents for the previous year.

Sears' Sale Slump 8.4% in December

Chicago, Jan. 7 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co., mail order and retail merchandise firm, today reported sales of $97,995,921 for December, down 8.4 per cent from sales of $106,940,659 in December, 1942. Sales for the 11 months ended December 31 were $816,297,677, down 3.8 per cent from $848,245,210 in the comparative months of the preceding fiscal year.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 7 (AP).—A broad buying movement was under way in grains today, sending all but the December wheat contract to a close at the $1.71⅛-a-bushel ceiling and pushing all rye contracts to new highs since 1926. December wheat, after reaching the ceiling, closed at $1.71¼. Oats and barley were strong.

Traders' attention was focused at the start on wheat, which rolled upward under buying by mills, cash interests and previous short sellers. When wheat reached ceilings, and offerings were insufficient to meet demand, buying interest switched to the rye pit. Trading in rye was believed to have been at an all-time record.

The May wheat contract was unchanged from yesterday's close. Deferred deliveries were up 1 to 1⅞. Oats were ⅛ to ¼ higher. May 80¼. Rye was ahead 2¼ to 2⅞. May 1.32¾@1.32⅞, and barley was up 2¾ to 2½. May 1.25.

Action of wheat was influenced by the prospect of the grain becoming "frozen" at ceiling levels. Those who were "long" on the grain were inclined to hold their positions on the possibility that Board of Trade directors would revise ceilings upward. The OPA ceiling regulation applied only to cash wheat and present maximums on futures are "emergency" limits set by the board.

Leonard Placed in 1A, May Be Lost to Nats

Tech Beats Western, 33-23; Coolidge Wins

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Ever hear of a promoter who hopes, sincerely, that he will never duplicate his biggest achievement? Well, there is one, and he's Corpl. Zeke Bonura, who staged the New Year's Day football game that drew 10,000 spectators in North Africa!

POVICH

Zeke, it seems, has come a long way as a sports figure since the day when he broke into the big leagues as a bumptious character who liked to laugh at himself and his own attempts to play first base. He has even become something of a philosopher, or so we gather from his V-mail letter in which he says:

"Unlike other game promoters, I am hoping this will be the first and only Arab Bowl Sports Card—because we all hope to be back in the good ol' U. S. A. next year, arguing with you about which teams will win the perennial bowl games at home."

Bonura, who didn't know that his game between Army teams would draw 10,000 fans when he launched the idea, writes modestly about it: "We are having a little football championship game here in North Africa on New Year Day that I thought you would like to know about. We dubbed it the Arab Bowl, and it will be the nicest event staged in North Africa since the Nazis set new records racing toward Cape Bon."

It developed that Zeke's promotion was a whopping success, and the fellow showed a positive talent as a promoter. He tossed in added attractions that included a camel race and a donkey race along the main street of the city on the morning of the game, and he presented five WAC beauties as reigning queens of the day.

His honorary queen of the festivities was no less than Rosalind Russell of the movies, and between halves he staged a parade of beturbaned, scarlet-cloaked Arab troops. Crack Army paratroopers bailed out over the field and landed on the gridiron before the game, and Bonura rustled up a gang of Texas cowboys from the ranks of the soldiers to do some fancy roping tricks astride Arabian steeds.

Long before Bonura staged his Arab Bowl game, there were frequent reports of the thoroughly competent job he was doing among the troops in Africa. Many months ago he was awarded a Certificate of Merit. He organized baseball leagues among the troops, played in the games himself, whipped up a frenzy of interest in the contests and was described by returning soldiers as "the happiest man in Africa."

Zeke is the only man in the history of baseball, incidentally, who ever hit a home run at the request of the Vice President of the United States. In fact the announcement that Zeke had been acquired by the Nats in March, 1938, was cause for Vice President John Nance Garner to strike a few blows for Liberty. Bonura was Garner's favorite ball player and for years he had tried to persuade Clark Griffith to obtain him for the Nats.

In Bonura's opening game with the Nats, he stopped by the Vice President's box on his way to the plate, and Garner said "Let me see you hit a home run, Zeke." Three minutes later, Bonura was jogging around the bases on a homer hit on a line into the center-field stands, and stopped, again, on his way to the dugout to receive the congratulations of the Vice President.

Bonura proved a good investment for the Nats, even though Bucky Harris was not smitten with his play at first base. Clark Griffith sold Zeke to the Giants for $30,000, and bought him back for $7500. But his batting couldn't offset his fielding and he ended up with his big league future uncertain, when the Army draft solved all his baseball problems.

To the fans who were not supercritical of Bonura's play at first base, he was a tremendous hero. Zeke was a ladies' day favorite, too. They liked his constant grin, his loud whooping and mitt-pounding, and his excursions into the pitcher's box when a teammate was faltering.

There was the day when big Zeke failed to field a ball hit to his right, but not very far to his right, on which the batter got a cheap single to right field. It should have been called an error for Zeke. Anyway, the batter reached first and started for second, only to think better of it and return to the bag when the right fielder returned the ball to Zeke at first base. It was a close play, but the runner slid back to first safely.

Whereupon a woman in Clark Griffith's box applauded loudly. The Nats' owner was baffled, seeing no reason to applaud anything. "Who are you clapping for?" Griffith demanded.

"For Zeke," was the answer. "He almost got that man out."

"Holy smoke," said Griffith. "That big bum missed that hit when it went past him. He didn't move out of his tracks."

"Yes," said the lady, "but Zeke got the ball coming back. He's wonderful."

Colts Rout Anacostia's Five, 43-16

By Tom Moore McBride

The McKinley Tech Trainers looked like prime contenders for the interhigh championship last night as they defeated Western, 33-23, in the nightcap of a doubleheader at Tech gym; Coolidge High trounced outclassed Anacostia, 43-16, but didn't appear as good doing it as the Trainers did in the harder-fought game. A crowd of 1000 saw the series open.

Tech started off like a whirlwind, with Buddy Timmons dribbling the length of the court for a score seven seconds after the opening whistle. Johnny Moffatt caught Western flat-footed during the first half with a series of court long passes to Tom Tulenko and Buddy Timmons. Tech led, 23-10, at the half.

Trainers Slow Down

The Trainers slowed down appreciably during the second half and the Raiders made a determined effort to even the score, boxing the long pass plays and getting in generally good defensive work. But the whittling wasn't enough and Tech maintained most of its lead to the end. Ray Love and Dick Hite were top scorers for the losers.

The Coolidge-Anacostia game was marked by a decided lack of action, with most of the Colt scoring handled by George Lafferty and the floorwork divided between Paul Sickles and Addie Bassin, who alternated at left guard, and Lou Weinstein at forward. "Flea" Flaherty, who carried the load for Anacostia during the football season, was top scorer for the Indians, with Bob Hausman the defensive boss man.

Roosevelt meets Central at 7:30 and Wilson clashes with Eastern at 8:45 p. m. at Tech gym tonight.

It's a Different Game But Bassin Is Still a Ball Hawk

Eager arms reached for the ball last night as Coolidge opened its interhigh season with a victory over Anacostia. Coolidge's Addie Bassin (face obscured) gained possession, just as he caught football passes galore for the champion Colts' eleven. Anacostia's "Flea" Flaherty is between Bassin and Coolidge's George Lafferty. At left, in foreground, are Coolidge's Joe Laing (12) and Anacostia's Don Polz (10).

Jack Battles To Score Over Costantino

By Sid Feder

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Beau Jack had to go all out down the stretch to take a 10-round decision from Lulu Costantino in Madison Square Garden tonight after absorbing a boxing lesson in the early going that at times made the lightweight champion look like an awkward amateur.

A 1-to-4 underdog in the betting against the onetime shoeshine boy from Georgia, Constantino danced all around him in the early heats, scored with slicing left jabs and had the jumping Jack missing punches by as much as 3 feet as he held an edge over the New York version of the 145-pound King for 7 of the 10 rounds.

Then, in the eighth, Jack leaped in with a smashing hook that caught the local larruper with his guard half down and snapped his head back, and from there to the end he took the play, although in the tenth, Lulu met the Beau head on and fought him to the wire.

On the Associated press score card, Jack had five rounds to four for Constantino and one even.

The officials were split on the verdict, with referee Eddie Josephs giving Costantino the fight, 8 rounds to 2. The judges, Bob Cunningham and Marty Monroe, voted for Jack, 5 rounds to 4, with 1 even.

Friends Defeats Woodward, 46-18

Friends School opened its basketball season on its home court with a surprisingly easy victory over Woodward School, defeating the YMCA aggregation 46 to 18. The handwriting was on the wall almost immediately after the start of the game, and Friends led 32-11, at half time.

The Quakers will meet Georgetown Prep on Tuesday.

Bridle Trails Sets Show Date Oct. 8

By a Staff Correspondent

New York, Jan. 7.—Thirty-one horse shows, a far cry from the hundred-odd of prewar days, today were assigned dates for the coming year at the annual meeting of the American Horse Shows Association at the Waldorf Astoria. Among these was the Washington Bridle Trails event, which was given October 8. President Adrian Van Sinderen reported that 37 member shows were held during the past year and that 77 others paid inactive dues.

Sammy Byrd Leading Los Angeles Open Golf

Los Angeles, Jan. 7 (AP).—Babe Ruth's former understudy with the New York Yankees, Sammy Byrd, surprised everyone by grabbing the lead today in the $12,500 Los Angeles golf championship with a dazzling 66 over the par 71 Wilshire Country Club course.

Always a steady shotmaker, Byrd was superlative as he fired long ones and putted flawlessly. He rammed home six birdies and made only one mistake during the 18 holes.

This pacemaking performance was especially good because of the heavy going caused by recent rains. The slow greens spoiled the game of many a competitor in the field of 135 qualifiers. Byron Nelson, the favorite, came in later with a fine 33-35—68, to gain second place. A stroke behind were such players as Jimmy Hines of New York; Willie Hunter of Los Angeles' Riviera Club, and Olin Dutra, the host pro, all of whom had 69s. The championship is being conducted under winter rules.

Byrd, who quit baseball in 1936 and took up golf seriously, had birdies on the third, sixth, eighth, fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth. On the par 3 thirteenth he punched a wedge short off the tee. That was his only slip.

Byrd's card:

Par out.. 454 344 344—35
Byrd (out) 354 343 334—32
Par in... 344 354 544—36, 35—71
Byrd (in). 344 443 444—34, 32—66

It was a day of good golf by those who were expected to be right up in the running. Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena, former tennis champion, who has been playing spectacularly all winter, was right up there with a 70.

Among the subpar rounds were those of Corpl. K. G. Wysowski, Sacramento, Calif., 35, 35—70; Johnny Bulla, Chicago, 37, 33—70; George Fazio, Pine Valley, N. J., 35, 35—70; Amateur Ralph Evans, Inglewood, Calif., 38, 32—70; Lee Diegel, Tucson, Ariz., 34, 36—70; W. A. Stackhouse, Sequin, Tex., 36, 34—70.

Mullin, Former Detroit Mound Ace, Succumbs

Wabash, Ind., Jan. 7 (AP)—George Joseph Mullin, who was with the Detroit Tigers for 14 years and led the American League pitchers in 1909 with 29 wins and 8 losses, died today in his home here after a month's illness.

Mullin, a native of Toledo, Ohio, came here 45 years ago to pitch for a Wabash team in the old Two-Eye League. He eventually signed with the Tigers, remaining with that club until he retired in 1916. He hurled a no-hit game against the St. Louis Browns July 4, 1912.

Mullin resided in Washington, D. C., for many years and is well known in sporting circles. He is survived by his widow, the former Grace Aukerman of Wabash; a daughter, Mrs. Lemoine Rish of Detroit, and two sisters, Mrs. Pat Bruen and Miss Edna Mullin, both of Toledo.

Adulator Wins At Hialeah

Miami, Fla., Jan. 7 (AP).—Adulator swept to victory today over 13 competitors in the $5000 Added Inaugural Handicap at Hialeah Park, where an opening day throng of 12,076 witnessed the start of 50 days of winter racing here today and poured a golden flood through the betting windows.

An opening day betting record of $635,758 was established.

The smooth-running Woolford Farms horse, ridden by Ted Atkinson, fought a nip and tuck battle to the stretch with Roman Sox, which finished second, and Harvard Square, the show horse.

Adulator paid $7.40, $4.70 and $3.40. Roman Sox gave backers $12 and $6.30, while Harvard Square paid $6.40.

Today's crowd was below the 16,531 that attended the opening day of 1942, the last year Hialeah operated. The mutuels handle then was $454,740, and the figure was surpassed after six races today.

Atkinson completely stole the show from the other jockeys by riding four winners in the eight-race card.

He led up to his triumph in the Inaugural by booting home Snarkling, at $10.80 for $2, over a field of 2-year-old fillies who went to post for the first time in the opener, and then sent Tight Shoes, at $4.80 for $2, to a photographic decision in the third.

The tiny rider closed out the performance with a $4.50 for $2 victory aboard Ksar of Audley in the finale.

St. Alban's Wins; Cotton Smith Stars

"Cotton" Smith, who cut a swath in the ranks of St. Alban's gridiron opponents last fall, was back at his old scoring tricks on the court yesterday as he accounted for 24 of the 44 points St. Alban's amassed in defeating Maryland Park, 44-21. Cotton averaged 10 points a game during the basketball season last year.

It was quite a day for the Smith boys all around, for Robert Smith scored eight points and was outstanding in St. Alban's defense, snagging the ball off the backboard on numerous occasions.

Cilinski and Pavone Win Gloves Titles

Some 3000 fans jammed Turner's Arena beyond capacity last night to witness 15 thrilling Golden Gloves championship bouts.

The only two champions to appear in the 1944 show successfully defended their crowns. Pete Cilinski beat back a determined bid from Ray Hanbury in the 135-pound senior joust, while Lew Pavone, a teammate from the St. Mary's Club, decisioned Nick Mancini after a rought three rounds.

The Cilinsky-Hanbury match, slated to be one of the top spots on the show, was just that. Both men opened fast, with Hanbury doing the bulk of the leading in the first frame. The Alexandrian began to find the range in the second round and rocked the challenger several times with rights and lefts to the head, taking punishment in return.

The third round opened with what was some of the most heated action on the card, both men slugging it out toe to toe. However, Cilinski weathered all that Hanbury could throw and came through the round to take the duke.

The team championship trophy in the senior division went to St. Mary's Club of Alexandria with 45 points, the Washington Boys Club finishing second with a total of 25. The Apollo Club was third with 20.

The Merrick Club captured the novice team title with 25 points, while second place was a five-way tie between Washington Boys Club, National Training School, Pete's A. C., St. Mary's Club and the Quantico Marines. Each team scored 15 points.

'Gang's All Here'—But Script Limps Behind

By Marjorie Kelly.

A strong contender for the title of worst film of the year turned up at Loew's Palace yesterday morning. Any way you look at "The Gang's All Here" you'll wish you hadn't. The technicolor is a gaudy horror that will make your head ache, there isn't a literate line in the whole script, the dance routines are executed with neither grace nor precision, and the direction is wooden and halting.

The picture is a nightmarishly bad joke on its excellent cast. Of a production starring Alice Faye with Carmen Miranda, Phil Baker, James Ellison, Edward Everett Horton, Charlotte Greenwood and Eugene Pallette, wth Benny Goodman's Orchestra providing music, it would be highly reasonable to expect some good moments. Probably it isn't safe to say there aren't any at all; there must be something worth looking at in a film with all that talent floating around, but if so, they're well buried, and the observer, stunned with dismay at what has gone before, is pretty apt to miss them.

Alice Faye, who can be a charmingly gay and natural performer, seems to have been borne under by the odds against which she labored, for her performance is lifeless and artificial. James Ellison, who is the romantic lead opposite her, is so briefly seen he doesn't have a chance.

Carmen Miranda has a role of the sort that keeps our neighbors to the South wondering just what our idea of them must be—she plays a greedy, stupid little Mexican flirt, whose one big idea is to make a lot of money. Her comic appeal is hopefully based on a habit of speaking English with every possible malapropism an industrious scripter could dig up.

The others in the cast all seem to have been very good sports about the whole thing, but one wonders why.

As for the plot, there just isn't one.

The theme, if such an abortion as this could be said to have a theme, was presumably to have been the "Good Neighbor" motif. Dance routines are mostly based on a Hollywood conception of life in the banana republics. Besides being ungraceful and filmed in splashy, lurid Technicolor with screamingly clashing color combinations, they betray the most glaring ignorance of everything one presumes they meant to interpret.

There's little point in going further into the gruesome details. If you want it for the record, the director was Busby Berkeley, the producer was William LeBaron, and Walter Bullock wrote the screenplay.

Children's Theater Plans

Peter Pan the Magic Man, who for the past several years has been entertaining New York children under the recreational plan of the city's park service, is to be the special attraction at the National Theater, Saturday morning, January 23. A ventriloquist will be on the program also.

This is the third in a series of six programs for children sponsored by the Children's Museum of Washington. The fourth will be a presentation of "The King of the Golden River," by the Clare Tree Major Children's Theater of New York, Saturday morning, February 5.

Tickets for both programs are on sale at the Children's Museum of Washington, 4215 Massachusetts ave. The telephone number is Emerson 4456 or 4457.

The Feminist Front

Miss Mary Frances Ackerman, publicist for the Ice-Capades, wants you to know that although this year's edition of the show has 108 women among its 152 members—a clear majority—it is unquestionably the best of the four annual shows thus far produced by the company. This dominated-by-femininity production has averaged from 90 to 97 per cent capacity in the cities in which it has appeared, and has shown a 25 per cent increase in gate receipts over a year ago.

Manager George D. Tyson has, Miss Ackerman tells us, followed a policy of developing as much feminine talent as possible ever since Pearl Harbor, when he realized that a shortage of male skaters would shortly be forthcoming. Seems it's paid off!

Tickets to the Ice-Capades will be available Monday morning at Uline Arena and are now on sale at the Fairway Sporting Goods Co., 1328 G st. nw.

Noah Beery, Jr.: Actor, Rancher.

Hollywood.—Noah Beery, jr., more closely related to Hollywood than any other actor, is probably farther from Hollywood than any other actor.

Noah, son of the famous villain of "silent days," Noah, sr., nephew of the famed Wallace Beery and husband of Maxine Jones Beery, whose father was the late Buck Jones, cowboy star, lives on a ranch in San Fernando Valley, stays out of night spots, and makes one picture after another.

Today he is costarred with Martha O'Driscoll in "Weekend Pass." Yesterday he was in a prominent role in "Gung Ho!" saga of the raid of the United States Marine Corps on Makin Island. Before that he was in "Corvette K-225." Beery, junior, has been in pictures ever since his graduation from North Hollywood High School, where he was a sensation in football and other sports.

His only ambition is to be a good actor. He has seen some of his Uncle Wally's pictures as many as ten times, and thinks he did his greatest work in "Viva Villa!"

"Some day," he says, "I'm going to be as good as that."

HEDDA HOPPER

A Very Grim War Film

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 7.—The reason so little is known about the content of "The Purple Heart" is that it's mighty strong meat. I wonder if that's the kind of film folks want. It's about the Doolittle flyers who were captured and tortured. You see the torture. Then they go into a mock trial. You don't actually see them beheaded, but they go out singing a hymn before that takes place. . . . Maj. Charles Vanda is spending his honeymoon in Florida. He was secretly married two weeks ago to Shirley Bergman back East. This is the second time for the major, the first for her. . . . Col. Frank McCarthy, aid to General Marshall, who was here with General Marshall a week ago, is well known in our town. He did technical work on "Brother Rat" at Warners. . . . Yvette, injured in the Lisbon clipper crash, is coming out to appear in the next George Raft opus.

HUGH HERBERT

Gathering 'Em In.

Columbia got a look at Nina Foch on the screen, took up her option and upped her salary. . . . Hugh Herbert stays on there another year. . . . Mrs. Louise Rose, who returned on the Gripsholm with her four children, is now in Hollywood with her children and working as secretary to Eddie Sutherland, who's directing "Pile Buck." . . . Don Hartman goes to Palm Springs to write the next Danny Kaye opus, which he'll produce. Now Paramount wants him to work on another "road" picture for Bing Crosby and Bob Hope. They'd like to call it "Road to Glory." But Don's signed up tighter than a drum with Sam Goldwyn. . . . A New York jewel expert, who's a guest here, told of being selected to appraise the jewels of Col. Edward Green, son of Hetty Green. Hold your hats! In the collection were 3400 solitaire diamond rings, 1400 diamond bracelets, 6 diamond, ruby, and emerald studded brassieres, and, accompanying each article, a photograph of a woman using same. The value runs into millions. Now you tell one.

Bargain Plus

Dion Stanwyck got Edith Head to make a hostess gown for his mother, and offered to pay her $6. His only requirement was that he wanted "shine" on it. The result is a dream with gold epaulets. Dion doesn't know that his mama paid Edith the rest of the price. . . . Cecil De Mille has persuaded Dudley Nichols to write a modern prologue for reissue of "The Sign of the Cross." Dudley's also doing Wendell Willkie's "One World," and "Enchanted Cottage," which he'll write, produce, and direct. . . . Groucho Marx takes his whole gang east for a six weeks' stretch. . . . Mark Kelly one of our ace sports writers, has just finished an amusing comedy laid in Reno, called "Melancholy Lady." Two studios are interested.

Shorties

Paul Lukas has the wanderlust in his eye again and hopes for another play when he finishes "Address Unknown." . . . I suppose when A. C. Blumenthal returns to Hollywood the town will shoot off firecrackers. . . . I don't wonder Kay Eldridge turned down "Tiger Woman." If we can't offer her anything better than that, she can stay right in the theater. They like her back there. . . . Wonder why Metro took the beard off Walter Pidgeon. On him it was becoming. . . . Jane Wyatt looks like the girl opposite Cary Grant in "None But the Lonely Heart." . . . Steve Hannagan will soon push off to Latin America. . . . Joan Crawford is back from a short holiday at San Francisco.

They're shooting two endings for "Till We Meet Again" and they're certain that the church will approve of one of them.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Jan. 7.

General Montgomery, the vegetarian, nondrinking, nonsmoking warrior, never allowed anyone to smoke in his presence until recently, when, while holding a press conference, he suddenly detected the odor of cigarette smoke. The General sniffed, and traced the smoke to a soldier standing outside. "What're you smoking?" Montgomery asked. The soldier replied: "Players, sir. Indian Players" . . . The General sniffed again and decided: "I like it." The word went out, therefore, that, while other brands are barred, Indian Players may be smoked when Montgomery is around . . . As a result, every cigarette brand is being smoked there. The smokers are careful, however, to place their cigarettes first into the distinguishable Indian Player box.

EMIL LUDWIG

Emil Ludwig, the biographer, has signed a contract with Ziff-Davis to go to Germany when the war ends and collect material for a biography of Hitler. In 1930, incidentally, Hitler arranged for the publication of a biography of Ludwig, called "The Emil Ludwig Case" . . . Count Sforza, who is recovering from a serious ailment, will be back in the news again. Sforza now has the support of Gaetano Salvemini, who was hostile to him when he returned to Italy . . . Lieut. Hans Habe, who wrote a book about his experiences in the French army, is back from Italy with a new book about his experiences with the American Fifth Army.

Diana Barrymore and Mrs. Bror Dahlberg, wife of the head of Celotex Corporation, gave a New Year's Eve party. One of the guests was Alexander Ince, who was advised to come early, for pretty girls would be there . . . Ince arrived at 10, and was delighted to find an unusual array of beautiful girls. There were three to a man. But at 11:45 the entire handsome cast of "Winged Victory" appeared. A few minutes after the soldiers arrived, the lights went out, to welcome 1944. And when the lights went up again, Ince discovered that the person he was holding in his lap was the distinguished, venerable composer, Oscar Strauss.

Lieut. Charles Bronner, who was a doorman at the Roxy, was shot down during the raid over Schevensford and was reported lost. Lieutenant Bronner worked his way through Germany, into France and finally back to England. He's doing his bombardier's work again . . . Bernard Baruch has no telephones at his South Carolina plantation retreat. Telegrams are picked up at the village twice a day . . . Kay Aldridge, the screen actress, plays a bit role—that of a secretary—in the final scene of "Over 21," the new hit which just opened. In this scene a movie producer orders her to record in shorthand all the conversation in the room. Miss Aldridge, a realistic actress, really recorded it all in Gregg. She once was a stenographer.

Gene Fowler's biography of John Barrymore, "Good Night, Sweet Prince," is a fascinating book, one of the most readable biographies in years. A number of magazines, including Reader's Digest, are bidding for the serialization rights, three film companies have entered offers, and a third printing has been ordered, although the book won't be published until January 10 . . . The cover is a painting of Barrymore by John Decker, who seems to have patterned his life after Barrymore's—drinking like him, grimacing like him, and even looking like him. Thomas Mitchell tells of the arrival of Barrymore and Decker at his home, both tight. Mitchell introduced them to his granddaughter. As they both peered at the child, Barrymore snarled at Decker: "Don't let the baby see both of us at once."

Lucius Beebe's chargin is deep and touching. He was involved in an accident between a taxi and a horse-drawn carriage. And Beebe was caught riding in the taxi . . . Representative Busbey of Illinois, is expected to lead the fight for the Dies Committee in the current session of Congress . . . Ned Sparks, the glum comic, was berating a gullible friend. "You believe everything," said Sparks. "Me?" I suspect everybody. Even when someone says 'Good Morning' to me I look first before answering" . . . Charles Barnet fired his press agent, pianist Carl Post, as usual. Then, as usual, Post played Bach's "Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue" and, as usual, was rehired.

Art Young, the cartoonist who died last week, made his last public appearance at a discussion following Dr. Frederic Wertham's lecture on the "Imagination of the Artist" before the Artists League of America . . . The last story Young told was an illustrative one—of the boy who busied himself with pencil and paper and told his mother: "I'm drawing God." His mother replied: "But, son, nobody knows how God looks" . . . The boy answered: "They will, when I get through."

Leopold Stokowski was invited to attend Esquire's all-American jazz concert at the Metropolitan Opera House on January 18. "Will the men be rehearsed? Stokowski asked. He was assured that he'd see an unrehearsed jam session. "Good," said the conductor. "When jazz is rehearsed, it can be as dull as a concert at Carnegie Hall" . . . Harold Young, aide to Vice President Wallace, listened to some high-ranking officers relate: "So Churchill said to me," and "at Teheran, Stalin said to me," etc., etc. "Did I ever tell you what Pershing once said to me?" said Young. "Pershing said: 'Young man, get away from that horse's tail,"' . . . Lillian Gish, doing a lecture, often travels in the baggage car to avoid being parted from her pet dog.

For more than 25 years the Cafe Royal on Second avenue has been one of New York's well-known restaurants. It's the Stork Club of the Yiddish Theater, frequented by the stars and poets as well as the alumni who moved to Broadway . . . Two years ago Hy Kraft wrote a play about the place and called it "Cafe Crown." It was an amusing comedy, starring Sam Jaffe. It had a fair run and became a summer-stock favorite . . . The Cafe Royal gloried in this recognition. And now, after all these years, the new management is changing the name of the place to Cafe Crown.

Colorful Horse Gets More Pay

Hollywood.—A horse which its owner describes as a "sunset colored palomino" is today ridden in Universal's Technicolor "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves."

The horse's rider is Turhan Bey, young Turkish costar in the Maria Montez-Jon Hall picture.

The steed, only mount in Hollywood to deserve such a prismatic description as "sunset colored," is of a hue slightly off the customary creamy tan, with a suggestion of pinkish skin showing through.

Dark spots seem almost magenta colored.

The horse's mane and tail are a reddish gold.

The animal's name is "Gold Dust."

Because of Technicolor reasons it draws bigger film wages than the other horses.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THOUGH NOT READY to make a public statement, WPB's steel division is worried about surplus production of steel, is actually urging relaxation of restrictions so that more steel may be consumed for civilian purposes.

This is probably the most important production development of the war. It has not been so many months since every school child in America was collecting scrap iron, while the best collectors won trips to ship launchings to see where the steel was going.

Those were days of desperate shortages. Before the scrap drives got going, many furnaces closed down for lack of materials. Today, furnaces are threatened with closing for exactly the opposite reason—they are producing more steel than is required for war needs.

In the big Social Security Building in Washington, where WPB is housed, a meeting was held the other day in which a representative of the steel division frankly told other officials that control should be relaxed on practically all steel products.

"We are producing steel faster than we are making up our minds what to do with it," said the official, "and it would be unfortunate if any of our steel-making capacity should stand idle until the necessary changes can be made."

He pointed out that it will take 60 to 90 days for all the officials and agencies involved to make the decision for diversion of steel to civilian use. Meantime, the mills keep rolling and the steel piles up. The alternative is for the mills to shut down and throw men out of work. As a result, WPB has definitely taken up possible relaxation of restrictions on civilian construction.

Note: This surplus steel production is one reason for the recent steel strike. Most people are unaware of what steel workers see all too clearly—that the beginning of the end of war-boom production has arrived, and lay-offs may be just around the corner.

Admiral King Bows

ON THE PRESIDENTIAL trip to Cairo and Teheran, most attentive attendant to FDR was the combined chief of naval operations and commander of the U. S. Fleet, Admiral Ernest King.

The tall, gruffy-voiced seadog, now beyond retirement age, constantly bowed attention before the President. "Are you sure you're comfortable, Mr. President?" he would ask. "Do you think our speed is too fast? Shall I order them to slow down a bit?"

Other high-ranking naval and military men who had seen the usually brusque admiral travel with the President before never had seen him so considerate.

Some of them even wondered whether King's behavior had any connection with the fact that his birthday was due right in the middle of the President's trip—his sixty-fifth birthday and the second milestone beyond retirement age. But regardless of Navy gossip, the President has decided to keep the admiral on, despite his age.

Ford Falls for Nepotism

IN HIS ELEVEN efficient years as a member of Congress, the record of dignified Representative Tom Ford of Los Angeles, has been excellent. At long last, however, the California Democrat has given in to nepotism.

Ever since Mr. Ford came to Washington in early 1933, his secretary, Amy M. Ghent, a middle-aged lady, has served him loyally. Most of the time, Mrs. Ghent had no assistant and shouldered her arduous duties alone. For this, in recent years, she was paid $2900 a year. Meanwhile Congressman Ford has maintained another secretary, Florence Reynolds, at $3600 a year in his Los Angeles office, to handle local political matters.

Some time ago, Mrs. Ghent had a shock. Her husband died. Recently, she had another shock. Though dependent entirely on her own earning capacity, she was informed by Mr. Ford that, after January 1, 1944, her services no longer would be needed. In her place, Congressman Ford sai , he planned to install his sister-in-law, Florence Cummings.

The Californian kept his word. His sister-in-law is now on the payroll, while Mrs. Ghent had to depart after eleven years of loyal service.

Note: Congressman Ford does not plan to run for reelection.

Goebbels Hits Washington

HERR GOEBBELS, the Nazi propaganda boss, has hit on a new theme to incite the German public—"slums" and "disease epidemics" in Washington. On Christmas Day, Goebbels gave out a fantastic broadcast on this subject, based on an article in the American Mercury.

The broadcast, picked up by the monitoring service of the Federal Communications Comsion on a short wave to the United States, declared that "50 per cent of the (Washington's) population live in slum conditions . . . Venereal diseases are raging, while the large number of immigrants have brought tuberculosis to the over-populated parts of Washington."

It is true that Congressman D'Alesandro of Maryland, chairman of a District of Columbia Subcommittee, reported that half of the Capital's population live in substandard housing. However, health officials point out that typhoid, typhus and diphtheria are virtually extinct in the Capital, while the Army has commended the D. C. government for keeping down venereal disease.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Federal employes write this column today.

The officials in my agency are worried over employe morale and turnover. The condition is nothing new but it has grown more acute within the past several months since it has become most difficult to find new people to fill vacancies. The officials talk about the usual ways to build up morale such as bowling leagues, dances, and other get-togethers for their employes. All this is fine but I don't believe they go to the heart of the problem. An employe who is dissatisfied with her work will continue to be unhappy irrespective of her social life. And work—hard work—is what we all do to get this war over with.

I'd like to see some agency try a down-to-earth approach . . . I want to see this problem placed in the hands of the employes to work out for themselves with only advisory service from the front office. An employe board should be set up in each agency where an individual could go to present his problem. The board should make known its findings and recommendations to the administrator and it would be his responsibility to act. I make this suggestion because the average unhappy Federal worker is made afraid to take up her troubles with the personnel counselor, personnel office, or her own supervisor. The threat of a bad efficiency rating, "Siberian assignment," or dismissal on trumped-up charges hangs heavily over the employe's head.

But an employe would talk freely to a board made up of his own colleagues and he'd feel more of an obligation to abide by its decision. It would give the employes responsibility and recognition and that's something they all want. And it would be a big help and eyeopener to the Cabinet member, administrator, commissioner, or the head of any office. These top people seem to take the everyday work of their agencies for granted and they're never concerned until a crisis appears. No administrator in Government that I've ever heard of gave a thought to employe conditions in the file room, in the phone room, or the typist pool. Employes in such places can be overworked, underworked and maltreated and the front office won't know about it. Subofficials won't bring it to their attention. But an employe committee could and would. What do you think?

FEA EMPLOYE CONDITIONS DISCUSSED

Tiny grains of sand compose the beach, but it does the job, holding the breakers in tow and forming a coastline. Sally Sue and Johnny Que—Government worker—is as important in his or her small job as the grains of sand that form the protecting shores. True, they mill around more frequently, rebel against changes and form conflicting opinions. They frequently yearn to become a sand dune or sometimes strive to leave their footprints on the sand of time.

Nowhere is this more true than in the spotlighted, controversial, amalgamated agency of Foreign Economic Administration. The papers far and wide have given much space to publicizing the surgery of removing unnecessary high-ranking administrators. I am one of the smallest grains of sand, but I think the rule of reason and logical thinking is still a necessary measure. No business would consolidate and retain the services of all previous officials and what have you. Then why should the Government continue duplication?

The morale in Building T is not as low as reported. The cliques are broken and meritorious work shows a semblance of becoming recognized. The long halls seem to indicate that the field day is over. Leo T. Crowley certainly has the good will and loyalty of the ranks. The little grains of sand and the pebbles are ready and willing to go forward together. Mr. Crowley has only to point the way.

STENO'S STORY

I certainly agree with Representative Ramspeck that something must be done soon to make the jobs of stenographers more attractive in the Federal service. I was graduated from junior college and attended business college for a year before I passed the Civil Service exam and was appointed a steno at $1440. My salary is now $1620 after two years. Yesterday I was at the Civil Service building and I noticed an announcement for common laborers. No exam or educational qualifications were required. The salary was $1500 a year. Is that fair? (Editor's note: The $1500 starting salary isn't the top paid common laborer by Uncle Sam. At navy yards and other places where salaries are fixed by wage boards the starting salaries go up to $1860 a year, a figure much higher than the average trained typist and stenographer.)

Jail Fugitive Nabbed

A 19-year-old sailor who escaped from Jessups Cut, Md., in November after serving 2½ months of a five-year rape sentence, was picked up by police last night when he became involved in a minor accident on the District side of Key Bridge.

Charged with driving without a D. C. operator's permit, the youth is being held for FBI officials.

Although wearing a Navy uniform when taken into custody, the youth said he had received a medical discharge several months ago. He had been residing in Baltimore, Md., until he drove here yesterday.

City News in Brief

A 5-foot carpet python and two flying phallangers were the unexpected gifts received yesterday by the Washington Zoo from Lieut. John Heinrich of Washington, stationed somewhere in the South Pacific.

Zoo officials said the three specimens were very rare and greatly appreciated. The phallangers were described as resembling an American opossum with a flying apparatus. The carpet python was so named because of the resemblance of its skin to an oriental rug, officials said.

Ring, Pearls, Watch Lost

A diamond engagement ring valued at $700, a pearl necklace with diamond clasp valued at $500 and a platinum wrist watch valued at $70 were recently lost by three young Washington women, police reported yesterday. The ring was lost in the washroom of American Legion headquarters, the pearls somewhere near Hotel 2400 and the watch on the grounds of McLean Gardens, according to reports.

The City Refuse Department is picking up "considerably" fewer Christmas trees from back alleys this year than in years past, City Refuse Chief William A. Xanten said yesterday. He said he could not estimate how many less. Meanwhile, some 30,000-odd unsold Christmas trees still are stacked at the city dump, too wet to burn and apparently unwanted for firewood by citizens to whom city refuse officials offered them. Xanten said used and unused trees will be burned probably next week, when they become dry enough.

Kane Says Court Erred

Charging that "either through oversight or press of work" Justice McGuire of District Court made an improper decision, Frank J. Kane, inmate of District Jail, asked yesterday that his conviction for robbery and the 1 to 3 year prison sentence which followed it be declared void.

Kane, through his attorney James J. Laughlin, states that at the time of the trial here in 1941 he did not have an attorney. Kane said a Federal Court in Georgia had ruled that he was denied his constitutional rights and although a writ of habeas corpus was granted, he was returned here for trial. Kane is now awaiting trial on three other robbery charges.

Henry Gets 15 Years for Slaying Wife

Convicted of the beer-booth slaying of his estranged wife, Lola Jane, 26, former policeman Jeffries D. Henry, 36, was given the maximum sentence—15 years to life imprisonment—by Justice Matthew F. McGuire yesterday in District Court.

Henry, father of five, took his sentence calmly. He had been indicted for first-degree murder, which carries the extreme penalty, but a jury returned a second-degree murder verdict.

The prosecutors in the case were Assistant United States Attorneys Cecil Heflin and Grace Stiles.

Henry was brought into court surrounded by five United States marshals. Defense Attorney F. Bernard Flaherty asked that a jury be appointed to determine Henry's sanity. Justice McGuire citing an earlier court ruling stated there was no factual evidence of insanity, and imposed sentence.

The evidence at the trial showed Henry married twice bigamously within a month before April 29 of last year, when he pumped one bullet into Lola, killing her instantly, and then wounding himself in a 13th st. restaurant-drugstore.

Henry pleaded temporary insanity based on an alcoholic psychosis, but five psychiatrists testified he was legally competent. Henry conducted several hunger strikes at the District Jail and once shouted "Pilate" at Justice McGuire at a prior sentencing date. But yesterday he said nothing.

McNabb Ruling Test Opposed By Counsel

Opposition to the certification of the test of the McNabb ruling was filed yesterday before the United States Supreme Court by Attorney James J. Laughlin, counsel for James P. Mitchell, who is known as the "society burglar."

Laughlin filed a brief opposing the Government petition for review of a Court of Appeals decision which set aside Mitchell's conviction on two house-breaking charges on the basis of the McNabb ruling.

The Government is using the Mitchell case as a test of the McNabb ruling in which the Supreme Court held that three alleged murder confessions were invalidated because the defendants had not been arraigned with "reasonable promptness."

Although Mitchell was held eight days before arraignment, police maintained the time element did not figure in his reputed admission of some 30 housebreaking cases. They explained he had made a voluntary confession soon after his apprehension.

After Mitchell was convicted on two counts, the Court of Appeals reversed the convictions on the ground he should have been arraigned "immediately and without delay," in conformation with a District statute. The Court held that because he was not, his reputed confession was inadmissable as evidence.

Mrs. Graves Asks Spouse's Divorce Suit Be Dismissed

Mrs. Florida T. Graves of 6926 9th st. nw., yesterday denied she left her socially-prominent husband, Harold Graves, in 1937 and asked dismissal of his divorce suit filed in District Court, by charging him with abandoning her without cause and refusing to return.

She said Graves was interested in the companionship of other women and since he abandoned her, she said, he has paid her $250 a month and permitted her to remain in a $9500 residence while he resides at the Cosmos Club.

$50,000 Fire At Hot Shoppe Injures Three

Three firemen were injured, none seriously, in a fire which destroyed the interior of a Hot Shoppe at 2123 Bladensburg rd. ne., early yesterday. Harold Shaw, manager, last night estimated damages as at least $50,000.

Pvt. Sydney A. Montgomery, 51, of 2928 17th st. ne., and Pvt. Philip Tipperman, 27, of 1420 Saratoga ave. ne., of No. 15 Engine Co. were admitted to Casualty Hospital suffering burns of hands, faces and ears. Pvt. John J. McLane, 48, of 1454 Montana ave. ne., of No. 22 Engine Co. was treated for minor burns. Men of two other engine companies also responded to the alarm.

As the firemen entered the building, they reported, the building was rocked by an explosion, evidently caused when gas was ignited. Flames spread through the entire structure, leaving only the charred framework.

Cause of the blaze, which broke out in the storage basement of the empty building about 5 a. m., was undetermined.

This was the second Hot Shoppe to be destroyed by fire within four months. The chain's restaurant at 5400 Wisconsin ave. nw. was burned September 24, with damages estimated at $80,000.

4 Soldiers Injured, Smash-up Snarls Traffic for Hour

Five persons, including four soldiers, were injured when a northbound Friendship Heights streetcar struck an Army ambulance at Wisconsin and Western aves. nw., shortly after 3 p. m. yesterday. None of the streetcar's few passengers was hurt.

The injured, as listed by police were:

Ivan B. St. Onge, technician fourth class, head and leg injuries, treated at Walter Reed Hospital; Laurence St. Jean, Maurice Gross and Robert Huff, technicians fifth class, treated at Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md. and later released; R. S. Cleveland, streetcar operator, Woodrow ave., Cabin John, Md., minor injuries, treated at scene.

According to Cleveland's story he had halted the car at Western ave. on a green traffic light and waited for the red light and green arrow which permits traffic to turn right on Western ave. On this signal he started his car, and as it swung into the loop he heard "the screech of tires and a crash."

Paul Martin, 17, of 1120 13th st. nw., a filling station attendant, said that the ambulance was traveling north on Wisconsin but he could not verify the traffic signals at the time of impact.

The crash knocked the ambulance more than 20 feet across the District line into Maryland against a telegraph pole. Northbound streetcar traffic was tied up for an hour and special busses were operated on Wisconsin ave. from the McLean Garden terminal to the District line to accommodate Maryland bound passengers.

Police listed Pvt. Robert Knece as driver of the ambulance. He was not injured.

Officer Tells Of Curbing Boy Crimes

Patrolman Oliver A. Cowan, whose work in controlling juvenile delinquency here has been attracting Nation-wide attention, yesterday described his methods before civic leaders meeting under the auspices of the Council of Social Agencies.

Terming his work in the Thirteenth Precinct area with nearly 1000 youngsters an "experiment," Cowan declared its purpose is to "give youth a chance to solve its own problems."

Since organization, under his direction, of the Junior Police Corps and Junior Citizens Corps, juvenile crime in the area has decreased, according to businessmen and property owners who were at one time its principal victims. Police records for the Thirteenth Precinct bear this out, it was stated.

Functioning on their own and with leaders selected from among themselves, the members of the two corps are progressing toward "true citizenship," the meeting was told. An "exchange for the needy," organized sight-seeing trips, a newspaper, as well as group discussion on how to meet the problems facing youngsters today, are some of the activities now engaging their attention and keeping them out of trouble, Cowan said.

Child Care Denied Fund Of $29,000

Declaring the foster day care program for children under 2 years of age to be "properly the function of a Government agency," the Community War Fund announced yesterday it had denied a $29,000 request by the Child Care and Protection Committee of Civilian War Services.

The sum asked, a letter to the committee stated, is, furthermore "a dangerously large proportion of the contingency fund."

Most of the $9000 granted by the fund for child care work in the past six months has been exhausted, according to Mrs. Henry P. Chandler, Child Care and Protection Committee chairman. Since its services for young children of working mothers is "too important to be dropped now," she said, other fund sources will be sought.

Money from Lanham Act funds, appropriated through the Federal Works Agency, supports day care centers under the Board of Education for children older than 2 years of age. Community War Fund money was sought to continue nursery schools for younger children.

However, according to Herbert L. Willett, jr., executive director of the Community War Fund, the foster home program can probably be financed through already existing social agencies—both District and private—without recourse to the contingency fund. Such an arrangement would also help cut expenses, spokesman added yesterday.

Lord Burghley Here

Lord Burghley, Governor of Bermuda, arrived in Weshington yesterday for a series of conferences with officials of the State, War and Navy Departments. He will be a guest at the British Embassy for about a week and will be joined in a few days by Lady Burghley.

Court Stays Penalizing Of Oil Concern

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough of District Court signed a temporary restraining order late yesterday to stop the Office of Price Administration from carrying out any administrative penalties against the L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc., until a court hearing on January 14.

Challenging OPA power to penalize businessmen accused of rationing violation, the Steuart firm had asked the court to prevent OPA from restricting sales of the oil firm to those customers served during the year October 1941 to 1942.

The injunction suit, filed by Attorney Renah Camalier in behalf of the company, charged the OPA lacks legal power to hold administrative hearings and impose penalties. The suit claims this action can be taken only by a court of law.

Customer List Demanded

On January 1 the OPA came to a decision after several weeks of hearings against the company. The agency restricted sales of the firm and ordered that it must furnish by January 10 a list of its customers during the October 1941-42 year and must turn over all expired ration coupons now in its possession before January 15.

The Steuart complaint asserts the firm will be driven out of business should the OPA order be carried out. The complaint further states the OPA failed to consider the seasonal character of the business. Customer lists in the oil business change rapidly, it is stated, and if the firm cannot seek new customers it cannot operate.

The Steuart firm was charged with not accepting coupons for about 385,000 gallons of oil, failing to surrender the required number of coupons, and making excessive deliveries.

Supplied Hospitals

The Steuart firm states the OPA was directly prohibited by its formation directive from controlling sales of articles to Government agencies and that the order will in effect do just this. Among the customers of the firm, it was stated, were Gallinger Hospital, Freedmen's Hospital, and various housing projects here.

On December 15, the firm was prohibited from selling to more customers than it had in the year prior to last July, and the firm considers the January 1 order is even more stringent.

D. C. Commander Of Bomber Group Is Colonel at 26

Elliott Vandevanter, jr., of Washington, at 26 the youngest commander of a U. S. heavy bomber group in the European theater, has been promoted to rank of colonel, the Associated Press reported from London last night.

Vandevanter

Stationed at a British base for the past seven months, Vandevanter led his bombing group in the Schweinfurt raid October 14 and recently was reported to have left heavy destruction along the west coast of Norway.

As a member of the Nineteenth Bombardment Group in the South Pacific in the early days of the war, Vandevanter flew the last Fortress out of Java and participated in many operations in Java, Australia and the Philippines. He received the Distinguished Flying Cross for his part in a raid on a Japanese landing party on Luzon December 14, 1941.

His wife resides at 2129 Florida ave. nw.

Wins $15,000 Damages

Mrs. Esther L. Dean, 26, of 2327 18th st. nw., was awarded $15,000 damages yesterday by a District Court jury for injuries she received in an automobile accident last May. She charged before Justice James W. Morris that she suffered complicated arm fractures, scars, and has been unable to work.

The suit was filed by her attorney, Dorsey K. Moffett, against Cyril T. Mitchell, a cab driver, and a motor car company.

Jail Report Of 2 Officials Kept Secret

Members of the Commissioners' committee investigating the District Jail questioned Ray L. Huff, superintendent of District penal institutions, and Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, at a closed meeting yesterday.

Leo A. Rover, former district attorney, was elected chairman of the committee. He said he was not permitted to disclose what was told at the session. Other committee members are Dr. Luther Reichelderfer, former District Commissioner, and Bruce Baird, president of the National Savings & Trust Co.

Based on Inmate's Charges

Probe of the jail was ordered after an inmate, Frank S. Fowler, charged that Orman Ewing, former Democratic committeeman from Utah, was shown favoritism by officials.

Meanwhile, Ewing, a former Utah political figure, was transferred from District Jail to Lorton Reformatory, E. A. Green, superintendent of the jail, said this was a routine move resulting from the expiration of a court order holding Ewing there during pendency of a real estate suit.

Wife Gets Court Order

Complicating the action, Mrs. Leola Ewing, wife of the man who was sentenced to serve 8 to 24 years for rape, obtained a District Court order directing Huff to show cause by Monday why Ewing should not be kept at the jail until termination of a suit brought by his one-time attorney, James J. Laughlin for $7500 in back attorneys fees.

Huff, named defendant in a joint injunction and damage suit filed by Fowler, was appointed by Commissioner Guy Mason to investigate the charges. He was later replaced by the three-man committee.

After yesterday's meeting, Rover revealed that the committee will meet again next Wednesday, probably in the board room at the District Building. They met yesterday at the National Savings & Trust Co. Building.

50-Bed Wing Opens Today At Gallinger

Early infectious cases of syphilis will begin receiving 5-day treatment in the new 50-bed wing of the District's center at Gallinger Hospital immediately after inspection of the $57,500 FWA project by District and FWA officials today at 11 a. m., Superintendent Daniel L. Seckinger said yesterday.

The new wing extends the rapid-treatment center to 100 beds, and patients in early stages of the disease now taking treatment at Health Department clinics will be admitted, according to Dr. Frederick Gullick, who administers it. About 6000 are now undergoing other types of treatment for venereal diseases at clinics, but only the early-stage cases will be accommodated at the new center, he said.

A limited supply of penicillin will be available for use in cases in which sulfa drugs are not effective.

Dr. Seckinger said monthly blood tests of 350 acute cases treated in the 50-bed center opened in July, showed little recurrence of symptoms. More than 100 have received the five-day treatment there.

The venereal disease center is open to patients at no charge. Dr. Gullick said he hopes all early infectious cases can be cared for there when the new wing opens. The Health Department has received many more requests than it could handle since opening of the first 50 beds last summer.

Meanwhile, Dr. Seckinger said shortage of fresh linens at Gallinger is being alleviated by sending some laundry out to be done, and a rat campaign has been instituted to cut down rodents on the grounds. Garbage is now sent to the city dump instead of being disposed of on the premises.

Law Explanation Urged to Combat Delinquency

Teaching of the District laws and ordinances in the public schools was proposed last night as a solution to the local juvenile delinquency problem by Judge Vincent Osterman, associate justice of Orphans Court in Prince Georges County, speaking at a meeting of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association. The citizens group adopted the proposal and agreed to place the resolution before the D. C. Federation of Citizens Associations.

The group also appointed a committee to investigate use of receipts from the Fairlawn Park and golf course, which, they contend, are being used for recreational purposes in other sections of the city while Randle Highlands youngsters have no large playground.

Most of Germans Disillusioned, Childs Declares

Seventy-five to 80 per cent of all Germans are now thoroughly disillusioned with the Nazi regime, but have no hope of overturning Hitler and his henchmen, according to Swedish sources familiar with the internal German situation, Marquis W. Childs, St. Louis Post-Dispatch Washington correspondent told a meeting of American Friends of German Freedom, meeting in the Statler Hotel last night.

Theater Owners and Doctors Complete 4th War Loan Plans

Determined that the Fourth War Loan drive, beginning January 18, will be a success, Washington theater owners and members of the medical profession yesterday completed plans for their drive activities.

A campaign to "Sell a bond for every seat" in every theater in the Metropolitan area was agreed upon by the local motion picture industry.

City doctors, with a goal of $560,000 with which to buy an ambulance plane, an equipped hospital plane and a 1000-bed hospital, were urged to become bond salesmen and to buy more bonds personally.

Theater owners met at the Earle Building yesterday and decided upon the "Stand for a seat" program and learned that the District Motion Picture Owners had appropriated $600 in bonds as prizes to the nine managers who sell the most bonds.

Dr. W. Calhoun Stirling, chairman of the professional division, in a letter to all physicians said final plans will be made for participation of members of the medical profession at a meeting next Wednesday at the Medical Science Building.

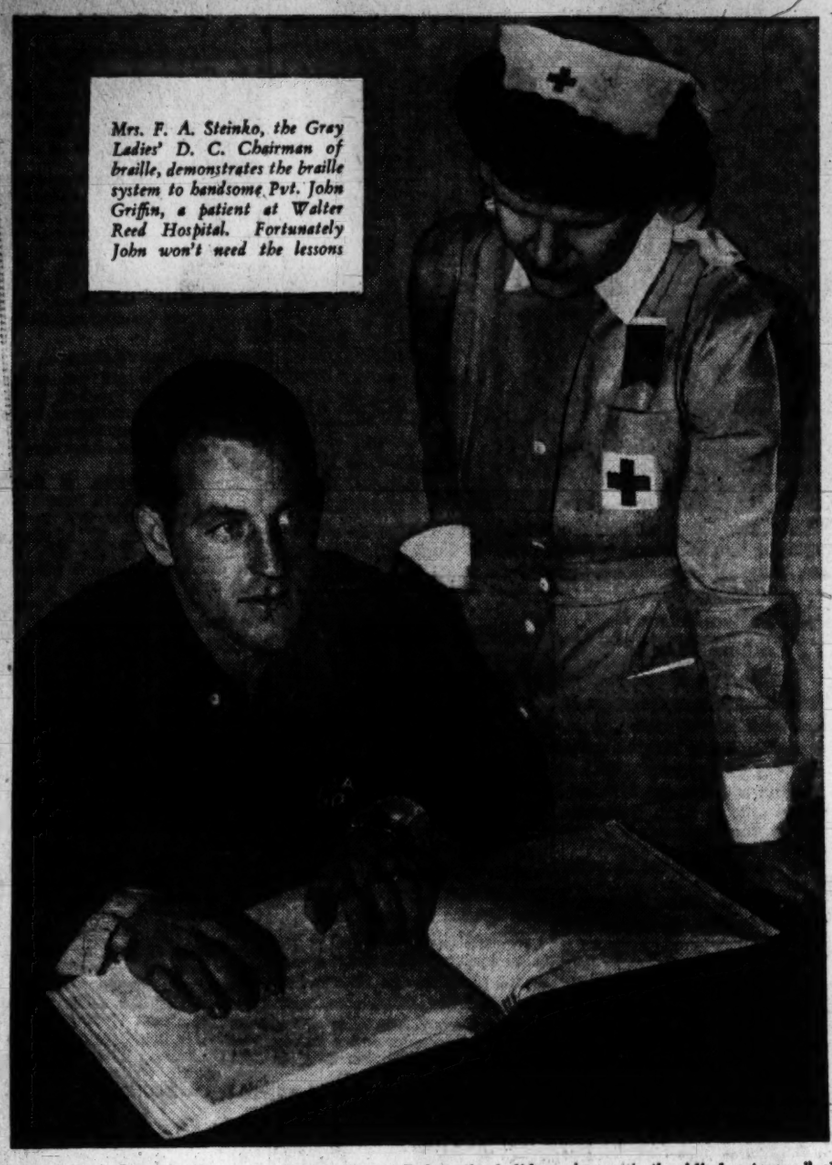
Gray Ladies' Chairman of Braille Teaches Blind Soldiers at Hospital



Mrs. F. A. Steinko, the Gray Ladies' D. C. Chairman of braille, demonstrates the braille system to handsome Pvt. John Griffin, a patient at Walter Reed Hospital. Fortunately John won't need the lessons

By Genevieve Reynolds

Just breathe "blind soldier" to comely Mrs. F. A. Steinko and immediately she swings into action.

The Gray Ladies' hard working District chairman of braille refuses all social engagements until the sightless veteran can read fluently.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

So eager is she to help the blind soldier that she junks everything except household and motherly duties. For more than a year she has been teaching braille to these young veterans at Walter Reed Hospital. Each patient has two lessons a week. Often she puts in 20 to 30 hours a week. Now that the blind veterans are being sent to other hospitals she has fewer pupils. But she works faithfully with those she can help. Between students she works with the mental patients in the neuro-psychiatric section of the hospital.

As a Gray Lady, Mrs. Steinko spends two days a week writing letters, shopping, running errands for the boys. Before the holidays she bought hundreds of the patients' Christmas gifts for their parents or sweethearts. Although her hands became stiff from letter writing, she continued to write—always with a cheerful smile. If it were a game the lad desired, she played it with him.

Other days she works in the obstetrics section of the hospital. It's by no means a glamorous task, registering cases or assisting the doctors in tedious, menial jobs, but she does it with a smile.

While youthful, blonde Mrs. Steinko likes her work in the obstetric and neuro-psychiatric sections of the hospital, her first love is braille. She took the course, first transcribing, binding, then reading with the Red Cross before it was discontinued several months ago. When the remnants of the work were turned over to the District Gray Ladies, she immediately joined the corps. Besides the time actually spent in teaching, she writes to braille magazines for free subscriptions for the boys. Also, she arranges to get them talking books from the Library of Congress.

"Most amazing thing about working with the blind veterans," she said, "is their wonderful morale. They tackle the task of learning braille cheerfully." No doubt Mrs. Steinko transmits much of her own enthusiasm to her pupils.

In addition to the work with the Gray Ladies, Mrs. Steinko serves as daytime air-raid warden in her home area—4869 Colorado ave. nw. Also, she is production chairman of Zeta Tau Alpha alumnae's Red Cross group. Often she helps to arrange the sorority's dances for servicemen. After her 18-month-old son and 4-year-old daughter are tucked in bed at night, she knits or sews for the Red Cross.

What does she sacrifice for the war effort? Modestly she admits to nothing but giving up a few good times. True, she could while away her leisure time with bridge, golf or movies, which she likes. Instead, she's gone all out to help the patients at Walter Reed. She lets nothing interfere with her volunteer work.

A native of Washington, she attended Hood College in nearby Maryland and George Washington University. Also, she did post-graduate work in education at the University of Nebraska.

Make It Do

Is There a Bed Hidden In Your Home?

By Elizabeth M. Boykin

News of war-crowded communities that literally have more people than beds comes along when drastic curtailment has been effected in the manufacture of our usual quota and quality of springs and mattresses. There may be some let-up in bedding manufacture restrictions but not much.

No use wailing—after all our boys in Italy and the South Pacific don't have innerspring mattresses either!

The patriotic thing to do is figure out ways to fix up an extra bed in your home—either for war transients, or for friends and relations passing through.

Hunt Up the Hidden Beds

In planning to get an extra bed ready for use, first shop around the stores—some of them still have prewar studio couches on hand. Others have separate springs that can be mounted on legs, and this, with a mattress, serves nicely in place of a studio couch.

If they don't have that, then maybe there's a war-era bed that deserves consideration. Some of these new emergency constructions are proving to be so satisfactory that they'll probably be made after the war, too.

Innersprings Are Recent

If you're still stuck for the basic essentials of your extra bed—springs and mattress—don't despair. Just recall prewar visits to homes of the past great—Jefferson's Monticello, Shakespeare's home at Stratford-on-Avon . . . remember the beds? Wood frames they were, with woven rope or leather strap springs.

Shakespeare's Ann Hathaway had a mattress filled with straw, and the mattresses in Jefferson's home were either corn husks, straw, or feathers. Doesn't hurt to remind ourselves that, after all, innersprings are pretty modern. And man achieved some great things while he was still sleeping on straw and animal skins.

In every American household there are the makings of a good extra bed. Maybe not a feather bed—maybe not an innerspring or a sponge rubber luxury. And for those who think they can't do a good day's work without a bed of ease—just mention Guadalcanal, Tarawa.

The thing America needs now is beds—any beds. The more comfortable they are the better, but any extra beds are better than none for a country on the move as ours is.

The Gentler Sex

When Men 'Make It Do'

Many a woman these days is regaining the lost feminine art of working miracles with a hairpin. Also, many a young man far away on land or sea from American ready made conveniences and luxuries is resurrecting the pioneer technique of "making do" with what is at hand.

This last week has witnessed a great conflagration of millions of discarded Christmas trees. In Washington alone, 30,000 unsold trees were burned, to say nothing of the used ones. Tons of store-made tinsel and ornaments were either destroyed or put away for next year. Getting and trimming a tree here called for little enterprise and less creative talent. But it was different for most of the fighting men at sea or at army fronts.

Stories are coming back of the way in which these resourceful young Americans maintained amid handicaps their Christmas tradition. Here is a typical "shirt-sleeves to shirtsleeves" saga of Pete a young naval officer.

Men at Sea
Make a Tree

As a child Pete had heard his mother tell of how her mother (his grandmother) on a Christmas when she couldn't obtain a tree, had made one for the children out of an ironing board. It was decorated with homestrung popcorn and cranberries, hung with homemade presents.

However, Pete, as a child, accompanied his father to obtain the greenest and most shapely tree the market afforded. It was lighted artistically with what was each year's fashionable electrical harmony. It was decorated with handsome store ornaments, always of course in tune with the tree's decor. It was hung with store presents, wrapped with great artistry and faultless taste.

This Christmas Pete was one of 800 men on a ship far out at sea. Have a Christmas tree these men must—so Pete and the others assigned to the task produced one out of a broomstick. They bored holes in the stick, cut wire coat hangers for branches wrapped them in brown paper, sprayed the whole with green paint, threw Epsom salts over the wet paint to make snow crystals, cut the bottoms out of tin cans, made them into stars and other ornaments, hung their makeshift presents on the "boughs," and managed by equally resourceful action to dress up a Santa Claus. "When Joyce Kilmer wrote 'Only God can make a tree' he had never heard of a sailor," Pete wrote his mother.

Learning to Live Without Gadgets

This shipmade Christmas tree typifies something very fortunate that is happening to Americans both at home and away. Due to the advances of science and industry, we as a Nation were in danger of losing our resourcefulness and allowing our creative powers to lag. We had become too dependent on mechanical conveniences and gadgets. When we needed anything that wasn't in the house we reached for the telephone. When we faced a minor crisis of any kind, we fell back on the corner drug store rather than our own imagination. At parties, instead of singing ourselves or providing our own music we turned on the radio. When we were bored we sought out paid entertainers. Every need had its specialist.

But at home things are different now. Men away from home are finding them even more different. In Army camps men are learning to live without gadgets and are tapping their own latent resources for entertainment. In the battle zones men thrown back on themselves in their struggle for survival are finding a new kinship with their frontier forefathers. This should all make for a strengthening of the national fiber.

Special Exercise Prescribed To Keep Body, Limbs Sturdy

By Ida Jean Kain

For the next three weeks, Ida Jean Kain will continue this special series to help you get in trim. If you weigh too much, you can lose the excess; if too little, you can bring your pounds up to par. Along with these diets will be special exercises for every figure problem—the program that makes you look your best steps up your pep and zest for living.

There's no doubt that legs are influenced considerably by the limbs of your family tree. How else account for the skinny legs on some fat ladies? Or the sturdy legs on some of the streamlined lassies?

It is quite possible you were meant to have rather slender calf, ankle and thigh measurements. That depends on your structure, which you inherited. Or, you may have inherited big bones with limbs in proportion.

Even so, these measurements may not be up to standard and that is a matter of muscle tone, or the lack of it. Almost every beautiful pair of legs gets plenty of exercise. Take Betty Grable . . . she is delightfully curvesome, but her beautiful legs are rather slender. Her leg measurements are: Calf, 12 inches; ankle, 7 inches.

For contrast, there's Eleanor Powell, the dancer, who is a big girl but has trouble keeping her weight up to normal, and whose legs are perfectly in proportion: calf, 12½ inches; ankle, 8 inches; thigh 20 inches.

Your bony structure tells whether your legs are supposed to be on the curvesome or the slender order. If you have a small wrist, you probably have a small ankle. But, regardless of your bones, you can have a nice curve at the calf and a smooth thigh-line. Here is a chart that tells the story, according to your wrist measurement:

Table in inches:

Wrist	Calf	Ankle	Thigh
5½	12 —12¾	6⅞—7	19 —19½
5¾	12½—12¾	7 —7¼	20 —20½
6	13 —13½	7½—8	21 —21½
6¼	13½—13¾	7¾—8¼	21½—22
6½	14 —14¼	8¼—8½	22 —22¾

Your ankle measurement is decided by your bones. But if your calf and thigh don't conform, it may be that you are underweight or over, or, just plain lacking in good, firm muscle tissue.

Exercises in which you pull toes up toward insteps and point the heels help to take down a calf measurement that is too large and exercises on the toes help to develop a spindly calf. Side-to side leg swinging and circling from the hip improve the thighs.

Americans on World Battlefields Find Movies the Next Best Thing to Home

By Jean Craighead

Every night around 8:30 p. m., lights in makeshift theaters go down and 1400 to 1500 shows go on the screen for American doughboys on every fighting front of the world.

These couple of hours at the movies are the nearest thing to Main st. and Mom's apple pie in the far-flung camps, according to reports that have come to Maj. John Hubbell of the Army Pictorial Service.

The films, given to the Army gratis by the motion picture industry, leave the country almost exclusively by air for the 19 overseas film exchanges. Three different pictures and accompanying shorts are sent to these posts in the Aleutians, the South Pacific, the Persian Gulf and Algiers, where they are redistributed and put on a circuit that carries them to the troops in the front lines.

Natives Attend

Although civilians may not attend the shows, the natives may, which statement accepts the natives' fighting instinct as sort of a foregone conclusion and brings the headhunters into a class with the pugnacious Yanks.

As part of the audience, the natives make a definite contribution to the shows. Most of them prefer to watch the screen from the rear, where they can get closer to the action. It doesn't bother the logic of a South Pacific aborigine that the people are backwards, and that the signs read from the right to left, so they behold these American oddities from a fuzzy wuzzie's idea of a box seat—the rear.

One evening, a very sincere native gent took offense at the way the hero on the screen was behaving toward his best girl, and he hurled a cocoanut at him.

It hit the actor, went through the screen, and bruised an officer on the other side.

Grable Is Tops

The natives also object to Hollywood's idea of drama. A locomotive speeding toward the camera is not a Zulu's idea of good photography. Terrified of an oncoming train one evening, they lit out across the hills and didn't stop until they were safely gathered in their ceremonial huts.

As to the Yanks taste in films, it's

Betty Grable. They want Betty Grable every night, and maybe Dorothy Lamour if they can't see Betty. According to the War Department, the demand for musical comedy is overwhelming. "Stage Door Canteen" was a terrific hit with the Yanks. It struck a familiar note.

The War Department in cooperation with the moving picture industry has made a successful effort to get the most recent films to the soldiers. Often they see a picture before it gets to the American public. "Madame Curie" and "Claudia" are already overseas, as well as "Wintertime," "Girl Crazy," "Whistling in Brooklyn" and "Holy Matrimony." The "Song of Bernadette" leaves for its war front premiere in about 10 days, according to Major Hubbell.

The Army also furnishes transports with the latest films, and sees to it that a sum-up of world news reaches the ships and troops at least once a week.

Traditional opening night at the front is carried on despite enemy flares in the distance. The soldiers and WACS put on their freshest G. I. ties for the arrival of a new film. When Frank Sinatra's pictures hit Italy for the first time, they went with a great deal of curiosity. A few WACS swooned in the best tradition, some were bored, and the men just sat and were pained by the whole display.

Boy Who Likes Skunks Learns Other People Don't

St. Paul, Jan. 7 (INS).—The prospect of being St. Paul's most unpopular youngster still plagued little Georgie Plett tonight.

Eleven-year-old George, rather naive, went hunting in a park last night. He caught a skunk, wrapped it in a paper sack, and took a streetcar for home.

Like all the other 22 passengers who scurried from the car before reaching their destination, George didn't reach his either. When only he and the conductor remained, George was escorted to the street—with no extra charge for the skunk.

The bouncer was alert when George walked into the tavern where his mother is employed. George and the skunk landed in the street simultaneously.

Puzzled by everyone's lack of consideration, George sought refuge in a movie. About the middle of the Donald Duck cartoon, he saw he was alone in the theater. The manager appeared, and George was in the street again.

So George did the only thing he could think of—he sold the skunk to a boy in the neighborhood for 50 cents.

Vegetables To Be More Plentiful

By Christine Sadler

Fresh vegetables will be more plentiful during the current winter season than for the same period last year, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimated yesterday from surveys showing approximately 21 per cent more acres planted to 13 crops.

Onions and cabbage acreages are up 44 and 24 per cent, respectively, the report showed, but BAE reminded consumers storage stocks of late 1943 yields for these foods are considerably smaller than for a year ago and that onions would continue short during the next several weeks.

The expected fresh vegetable increase will need to be used to fill in gaps left in the canned supply, BAE intimated, reporting the civilian per capita amount of canned vegetables for the winter at from three-fourths to four-fifths of the 1942-43 quota.

Truck Crops Decline

For the season just ending truck crops for the fresh market were 7 per cent under the 1942 figure, although "this smaller commercial production was offset at least partially by increased production from victory gardens."

Prices received by farmers for these crops were substantially above those for the preceding year, fresh market shipments averaging 60 per cent higher in price and truck crops for processing about 35 per cent up.

December cold in Florida did extensive damage to tender crops such as beans and peas and delayed the strawberry harvest from three to four weeks, but hardy crops such as cabbage and lettuce escaped unhurt.

Potatoes Plentiful

BAE noted the continued huge supply of Irish potatoes and also increased acreages for this winter. The Government's program for supporting potato prices resulted in approximately two million bushels of the late variety being placed under loan by December 1, it was reported.

Also noted were the high prices paid at wholesale for sweet potatoes during December, which during the last week of the month were selling at more than twice the price for that date in 1942. Sweet potato prices are now "frozen" by OPA pending dollar and cents ceilings.

Prices on the 13 major fresh vegetables to be harvested this winter were announced tentatively in October, with the actual OPA regulation governing them yet to be worked out. The 13 are snap beans, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, cucumbers, eggplant, lettuce, green peas, lima beans, peppers, spinach, and tomatoes.

President Aids Girl, 10, Get 'Spanyal' Pup

Stoneham, Mass., Jan. 7 (AP).—Little girls often dream but this one did something about it—so today the dream of 10-year-old Ann Gilcreast is a wondrous reality.

Ann dreamed of having a fluffy cocker spaniel to keep her mother and herself company while her father, Lieut. Alden C. Gilcreast, was fighting with the Navy overseas. But cocker spaniel puppies cost money and her mother told her they couldn't afford one. So Ann sat down and wrote a letter to the President.

The letter read:

"Dear President Rozevelt: My name is Ann Gilcreast and I live at Nine East st., Stoneham, Mass. I am 10 years old and in the sixth grade.

"Since you are presedent and head of the United States, I would like it very much if you would reduce the prices of cocker spanyal puppies. We would like one very much but with prices the way they are now we cannot afford one. Will you please write me a letter back and tell me if you are going to reduce the prices.

"My father is in the Navy and is in Africa. So you see we would like a puppy very much to keep us company these cold winter nights. I would thank you very much if you would reduce the prices.

"Sincerly Yours, Ann Gilcreast.

"P. S. Don't forget to write to me and tell me if you are going to reduce the price of cocker spanyal puppies. Ann."

The President turned the letter over to the OPA and that agency discovered a Federal employe, about to leave Washington, who was trying to dispose of a cocker spaniel puppy.

The OPA moved into action and today Ann has her spanyal—and for free.

NHA Ordered Tenants Placed Before Eviction

Unless owners of the apartment houses at 2618-20-22 13th st. nw. find other suitable homes for their 111 tenants, the National Housing Agency will not release the buildings for conversion, a letter written by NHA Administrator John B. Blandford, jr., two months ago asserted, it was learned yesterday.

Introduced by counsel for the tenants at hearings before Judge John T. McMahon in Landlords and Tenants Court Wednesday, the letter, addressed to Senator Millard E. Tydings and dated November 8, 1943, was not entered into testimony.

Eviction proceedings against the apartment houses' present occupants are being sought by Edwin C. Baltz, owner, who maintains the existing 18 apartments can be converted into 42 units for war-workers.

NHA "will not proceed in this case unless he (Baltz) can make arrangements satisfactory to the tenants for their rehousing elsewhere," the letter stated. "Certainly it is not the intention to disturb unduly ose who are doing their part in helping the war effort," it declared.

No steps to rehouse the present tenants, many of whom are war-workers and their families, have been taken by Baltz, it was asserted before Judge McMahon. Baltz, himself, admitted conversion of the properties would net him about $4000 a year over what he is making on the houses now.

We're talking about cotton dresses, of course! And January is the time women seem to like to pick 'em! Maybe it's because the crop looks so fresh and new then . . . maybe it's because the fashions look so temptingly gay, women just can't wait till June. And this, of all years, January is more than ever cotton pickin' time! For 1944 cottons have gone high-hat in style—taken on new high-spirited ways! That's why The Hecht Co.'s Fashion Shops present a bumper crop of glamour-cottons now—cotton from California—cottons lively with the Mexican influences—cotton pretty as a picture—cotton dresses—cotton suit-dresses — cotton jumpers — cotton blouses — cottons for misses, juniors and Miss Teens—cottons you'll want to pick now . . . because you love 'em in January as you do in June! And here are two tips for 1944 fashion-wise women: Cottons help conserve your "best" dresses and banish dry cleaning problems.
